Steel Firms Get Saturday Deadline on Pension Plan

Murray Threatens Walkout of Million If Fact-Finders' Program Is Declined

By the United Press

CIO President Philip Murray yesterday served an ultimatum on the steel industry to grant the pension and insurance benefits recommended by President Truman's fact-finding board or face a strike of a million steelworkers at midnight Saturday.

His clear-cut demand, ending a week of confusion about the union's stand, was delivered after a day of mediation conferences with Federal Conciliation Director Cyrus S. Ching and officials of 37 major steel companies.

Ching announced that the mediation conferences will be resumed today.

Expected to Stand Pat

Industry spokesmen did not reply immediately to Murray's ultimatum. But they were expected to stand pat on their previous refusal to accept the fact-finders' proposals in their entirety.

Murray made it plain that the union would settle for nothing less.

He said the union did not like all of the board's recommendations but had offered to accept its full report as a compromise "in the interests of the public."

He added firmly that there would be no further bargaining unless or until the industry agrees to accept the report too.

The board turned down the union's demand for a 12½ cents an hour wage increase. It recommended a "package" of company-financed pension and insurance programs which it estimated would cost 10 cents an hour per worker.

Opposes Advance Commitment

The industry, led by the big United States Steel Corp., had offered to reopen bargaining but had balked at any advance commitment to accept the board's proposals.

Ching said in inviting union and management leaders to mediation meetings here that he thought it possible they were arguing about "the meaning of words" rather than about basic differences.

Murray, however, ended all speculation along those lines with his unqualified announcement that the union will strike on schedule unless the companies speedily agree to negotiate contracts

"The presidential board suggested 4 cents an hour for insurance and 6 cents an hour for pensions," he said. "There has been a finding of fact on that, and we will stand on that finding."

He said his previous statements about using the report "as a basis for negotiations" meant that the

Scolded Boy Holds Breath, Collapses; Firemen Save Him

East St. Louis, Ill., Sept. 19.—(U.P.) Firemen said today they used 500 pounds of oxygen to revive a 15-month-old boy who held his breath until he lost consciousness.

An inhalator squad worked for 50 minutes on little George E. Bruner, jr., who apparently had stopped breathing when his father brought him to the nearest fire station.

The boy's mother said he held his breath until he turned blue in the face and lapsed into unconsciousness because she scolded him for climbing on a windowsill.

Physicians at Christian Welfare Hospital said the boy was in good condition.

Coal Miners Stay Out of Pits As Railroads Begin Layoffs

NO WORK TODAY—Tony Russian, local United Mine Workers president at Pottsville, Pa., takes it easy and reads about the "no pension, no work" protest walkout of hard-coal miners he helped enforce. The nose and eye injuries, he said, were the result of local post-election scuffle, not the hazards of his job

Pittsburgh, Sept. 19 (AP).—Coal walkouts today developed into a Nation-wide mine shutdown punctuated by minor violence. "No pension, no work" was the miners' slogan.

A voluntary strike by nearly all of John L. Lewis' 480,000 United Mine Workers choked off coal production in 20 States. It is the twenty-first major coal stoppage since World War I and another UMW show of strength.

Miners are demonstrating their anger at Southern coal operators who refused to continue 20 cents a ton royalty payments into the UMW pension and welfare fund.

UMW President Lewis said their refusal to make benefits after their contract expired June 30 forced him to suspend fund payments to aged and ailing miners. It's all part of the union's fight for a new contract. Lewis wants higher royalties and more pay for shorter hours.

Lewis wouldn't talk on the mine shutdown. He doesn't call strikes. He only calls them off. UMW leaders said the new walkout is strictly a rank-and-file idea, voted on in local union meetings.

Joseph E. Moody, president of the Southern Coal Producers Association, lost little time in going to bat against Lewis.

"Mr. Lewis is trying to mislead the American public and the members of his union," Moody said in a statement at Washington.

Moody flatly denied the reason for suspension of welfare payments was the failure of Southern operators to continue payments into the fund, declaring:

"The reason is that the fund was established on an unsound basis and that it has been operated in a manner that inevitably led to its collapse."

"As the fund has been operated, apparently there is no limit to the claims upon it," Moody added. "It is a Frankenstein which, if continued as it has been in the past, will wreck both the coal industry and the union itself."

Moody ended with the challenge that the coal industry, the union and the public "insist that the welfare fund be put upon a reasonable and business-like basis."

In West Virginia, three employes of a strip mine where coal veins near the surface are stripped by power shovels were beaten by what they called part of a motorized caravan of roving pickets.

A 1000-man force in 150 autos scoured the highways near Clarksburg, ready to pounce on any non-unionized operation which remained open. Five Harrison County pits were closed when pickets showed up this morning.

Pennsylvania To Lay 15,000 Workers Off

Philadelphia, Sept. 19 (AP).—The Pennsylvania Railroad announced today it will furlough approximately 15,000 shop and maintenance employes Wednesday.

A railroad spokesman said the action is being taken "due to the cessation of coal mining."

"The disappearance of coal traffic from the railroad, combined with the generally low level of business, forces this action," railroad officials said.

Earlier the Reading road had announced it would lay off 1000 workers, and the Illinois Central planned to drop 130 immediately.

B. & O. Will Lay Off 3758 as of Friday

Baltimore, Sept. 19 (AP).—The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad announced today it will furlough 3758 employes this week because of the shutdown of the coal mines.

It said the furloughs would go into effect Friday and will last until October 3.

Baltimore, 928; Cumberland, Md., 671; Keyser, W. Va., 325; elsewhere, particularly in the Pittsburgh and Cincinnati areas, 1834.

The railroad derives much of its income from hauling coal.

Virginia Planning Further Layoffs

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 19 (AP).—The coal miners' walkout will result in the layoff of more Virginian Railway workers by the end of this week.

President F. D. Beale said today he thought between 200 and 300 employes would be affected.

The coal hauling line's payroll already had been cut about 40 per cent by the three-day mine week.

Beale explained that some 1600 employes have been made idle by curtailed coal traffic to Norfolk from the mines, along with a big revenue drop. The Virginian's normal working force is 3800.

Near-Tragedy

News Story Recalled, Mothers Save Two Girls in Icebox

Two Alexandria girls narrowly escaped suffocation in an unused icebox yesterday, saved by virtue of a morning paper story of a fatal similar accident.

The two are Margaret, 5-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gorman, 139 Taylor Run pkwy., and her chum, Cheryl, 4-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sumtion, 124 Taylor Run pkwy.

Following the near-tragedy, the icebox, with another one, was removed by the Alexandria Housing Authority from the rear of a veterans housing project. Residents said the boxes had lain unused and unguarded for months at the project.

Mrs. Richard Mason, who lives at No. 143 in the same block, was primarily responsible for the rescue, and two Alexandria firemen, who also live there, Floyd L. Ellmore, of No. 135, and Richard Gray, of No. 132, revived the girls with artificial respiration.

According to Mrs. Gorman and Mrs. Sumtion, the two mothers missed their girls, who had been playing together. As they sought them, they contacted Mrs. Mason.

She remembered a story of a Fresno, Calif., child suffocating in an ice box in the morning papers yesterday — and remembered the unused and unguarded iceboxes down the street.

With the mothers, she hurried there and opened the door of one box. The two girls were inside, semiconscious. As the mothers screamed and pulled the children

London Action Is Bold Step For Recovery, Hoffman Says

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

The United States Government watched approvingly yesterday as one European country after another hurried to cut the exchange value of its currency.

Officials here expected the wave of devaluations to spread as far as Latin America, and to sweep away most of the unrealistic currency values that had hampered foreign trade since the end of the war.

At the Economic Cooperation Administration and the Treasury, especially, officials were as pleased as Cheshire cats, although they knew that cheaper foreign currencies would expose American goods to stiffer competition.

Bold Measure, Says Hoffman

Paul Hoffman, the ECA Administrator, told a press conference that Britain's 30 per cent devaluation was "a bold and imaginative measure of far-reaching importance to the European Recovery Program."

"It is dramatic evidence of earnestness of purpose," he said. "It signifies that Great Britain has decided to compete in a free world to capture dollars which are essential to her recovery, and to work aggressively toward conditions permitting a higher level of competitive trade.

"It opens the way, not only for her but for Europe as a whole, to earn more dollars."

But Hoffman repeated his familiar warning that devaluation was not a cure-all for Europe's problems. The European countries, he said, must push their efforts to increase productivity, to lower manufacturing costs and to push their sales in the rich American market.

He argued that Europe could balance her accounts by selling an additional two-and-one-half billion dollars' worth of goods in the United States—an amount, he said, that was only 1 per cent of the American national income.

One indirect result of devaluation, Hoffman recalled, would be a sharp increase in the so-called counterpart funds set aside by each country getting free dollar grants under the Marshall Plan.

The ECA legislation requires every recipient country to set aside a fund in its own currency, equivalent to the amount of the dollar grants it gets. These huge

Franc Slashed To 350 for $1; Ottawa Dollar Reduced 10%

France and Canada last night joined the countries following Britain's currency devaluation example.

The British-led slash in money values has spread to 18 other nations and the end is still not in sight.

Those that have acted so far:

Australia, Burma, Canada, Ceylon, Denmark, Egypt, Finland, France, Iceland, India, Israel, Ireland, Malaya, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, South Africa, Sweden.

Country-by-country, this was the picture of the world-wide monetary shake-up one day after Britain announced her decision:

FRANCE—The franc was liberated to find its level on the free market, with the government expressing belief that $1 would bring 350 francs. This would be a devaluation, since the free market rate has been 330 to $1. France abolished its commercial rate of 272 to $1 and also a formal rate of 214 to $1 that had fallen into disuse. The cabinet fixed a new, formal franc-pound ratio of 980 to 1. Using $2.80 pounds, that converts at 350 francs to the dollar. The pound is not on the free market in France.

American visitors to Britain and Ireland will have to learn new money arithmetic from now on.

The shilling (20 to the pound) is worth 14 cents instead of 20. The penny (12 to the shilling) is worth a little over one American cent.

Put the other way, a dollar is worth just a shade over seven shillings. For 5 dollars, the traveler should get a little more than 1 pound, 15 shillings.

CANADA—The Canadian dollar is devalued by approximately 10 per cent. The Canadian dollar has been held at par with the American dollar in trade in Canada since 1946 but has sold at a discount of 6 to 10 cents in the United States.

SWEDEN—The Swedish government fixed a new rate of exchange at 5.18 crowns to the dollar. The old rate was 3.60 crowns.

AUSTRIA—The Austrian national bank suspended foreign currency trade with the exception of dollars. New rates of exchange for the schilling in all currencies

After Devaluation

Prompt Increase Expected In Britain's Export Trade

By J. A. Livingston

London, Sept. 19.—Ever since the end of the war the British economy has been on stilts.

The pound has been overhauled. That made it attractive for foreigners to sell in the British market but not to buy there. Result: A mounting British trade deficit and a constant drain on Britain's gold and dollar reserves which even Marshall Plan advances could not correct.

But now devaluation of the pound has put the British economy back on the ground and poses a new question: Can postwar Britons learn to walk on their own feet?

Devaluation solves no problems. But it makes possible a solution of problems and Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Stafford Cripps, who only two months ago pledged that the pound would not be devalued, is to be congratulated for the courage of self-reversal.

He has embarked Great Britain and the Labor Party on a great economic adventure. If he succeeds in building up British exports and balancing the Nation's international payments, he will go down in history as the statesman who won the battle of the pound.

Devaluation will give British export trade a prompt boost. For example, suppose an American importer has been buying British suits at 15 pounds apiece. Before devaluation that came to $60. He'd have to sell the suits in the United States for $90 to $100 to clear expenses, including the cost of seeing the goods through customs. Sales at that price would be fairly limited.

Now the American merchant's outlay might be as little as $42 per suit because of devaluation. He'd be able to sell the suits for $65 and obtain the same percentage markup and have the possibility of increased sales.

Nor is it absolutely necessary for the British manufactuer to pass along to American retailers the full devaluation. Maybe now he can sell the suit for 18 pounds as against 15, increasing his profit. That would still cut the price from the original $60 to $50.40. The American merchant could market

Britons Rush To Buy Flour; Speculators Grab Up Gold

London, Sept. 19 (AP).—Hope, fear and confusion among governments, homes and banks were the first frantic reactions today to the British pound devaluation and the world monetary shakeup.

While common folk feared higher prices and harder times, brokers rushed to buy shares in commodities the world always needs—rubber, tin, cotton, copper—and in speculative gold to safeguard their cheapened money.

British exporters looked for a boom and a full-scale invasion of the dollar market with their cheaper products. Stiffer competition loomed for American industry.

Government ministers were in huddles in Europe, Africa and Asia.

In most countries in western Europe, and in many lands besides, banks and stock exchanges closed or else suspended trading in foreign currencies until the situation settles.

Eighteen nations already had followed Britain's lead and devalued their moneys.

The Netherlands decided on devaluation, but had not yet announced the new exchange rate for her guilder.

Other countries which may reshuffle their currencies were western Germany, Austria, Italy, Greece and Pakistan.

Cripps Stresses Exports

Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer who announced the 30½ percent devaluation of the pound Sunday night, himself rang the firebell for an accelerated export drive by British merchants.

He told a news conference crowded with 400 reporters the British could expect no miracles from devaluation. The British, he said, "must redouble all our efforts" to increase exports.

In the midst of the world-wide readjustments, British announced conclusion of a five-year £100,000,000 (280 million dollars) trade agreement with Communist-governed Czechoslovakia. The government said the deal was reached Saturday, before devaluation was announced, and is subject to ratification by the two governments. Informed sources said the import of sugar, timber and specialized machinery from Czechoslovakia also should ease the pressure on Britain's dollar store.

A responsible east European diplomat in the Soviet orbit said it was highly unlikely that any coun-

Russian Threat Cited as Arms Debate Opens

By Robert C. Albright

Senate debate on the Administration's $1,314,010,000 arms assistance bill opened yesterday with warnings that recent increases in Russian military spending are aimed ultimately at the United States.

1. Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) noted that Russia maintains a five-million-man army and has stepped up her military budget by 19 percent. Said Connally: "They're not organizing to play polo."

2. Senate Armed Services Chairman Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) quoted Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, as saying 40 to 50 modern divisions in western Europe "could withstand an attack for months and perhaps turn the tide."

Connally and Tydings, whose committees jointly wrote and reported a compromise version of the arms-aid program, presented the Administration's case for helping friendly nations to resist any Communist attack.

Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.) meanwhile opened a fight to cut back the bill's one billion total for Europe to 5 or 6 hundred million dollars, 300 million dollars of it in cash. George told newsmen he is thinking about revising his amendment to approximate the House-approved figure for Europe, $580,495,000.

Connally said he thought the Senate would approve the joint committee version of the bill but conceded the George amendment will be the measure's severest test.

Another amendment, earmarking from 10 to 25 percent of the fund to build the "nucleus" of an international police force under the Atlantic Defense council was

Labor Facing Political Test Over Sterling

By R. H. Shackford

London, Sept. 19 (U.P.).—Britain's Labor Government tonight faced a political crisis, and possibly a general election test, as the currencies of the sterling world tumbled to the level of the fallen British pound.

Opposition Leaders Winston Churchill and Clement Davies were demanding an immediate session of Parliament, almost a month early, and top Conservative political strategists predicted that the government itself would seek an early general election.

It appeared possible that Churchill's Conservatives and Davies' Liberals might force a test vote on the drastic decision which cut the pound from $4.03 to $2.80 and forced 17 countries all around the world to slash the values of their money.

However, if it appeared that Labor was seeking an early election, the opposition might decide not to force the issue. The next general election must be held before next summer, but the government can call for a national vote at any time between now and then.

[An Associated Press dispatch said the consensus seemed to be that devaluation had not hastened a general election, which in the normal course would not be held until next spring.]

Churchill's top advisers believed the government would call a "snap election" to get the voting over with before the inflationary effects of devaluation are felt by the "little people" who are the mainstay of the government's strength.

Laborite leaders in Parliament indicated when the House adjourned last summer until mid-October that an early recall might be necessary, and the government was expected to agree to the opposition call for a new session not later than next week.

Hungarian Implicating Dulles In Plot Can't Identify Photo

Budapest, Sept. 19 (U.P.).—Dr. Tibor Szonyi, fourth defendant in the Hungarian treason trial, said today he had plotted at length with Allan Dulles, formerly of the United States Office of Strategic Services, to set up an anti-Communist underground in eastern Europe.

Then he failed to recognize a picture of Dulles, brother of Senator John Foster Dulles (R., N. Y.).

Szonyi, who attempted to link Dulles and the Zionists with American espionage attempts to overthrow Communist governments of eastern Europe, confessed his guilt in full and then hurriedly conferred with the judge on his failure to identify Dulles' picture.

The microphone did not amplify their conversation sufficiently, but afterward the judge and Szonyi agreed that the defendant could not recognize the OSS officer's picture because it showed Dulles wearing glasses. When he knew him in 1944, he said, Dulles did not wear glasses.

(In New York, Dulles laughed heartily when told of today's trial development and said he had "no recollection whatsoever of ever having met anyone of that name (Szonyi)." "Furthermore," he added, "I've worn glasses for many, many years.")

The 45-year-old former member of the Hungarian Parliament said that the United States in 1944 ordered infiltration of eastern European Communist parties when it try in the Russian sphere would devalue its currency to conform to the shakeup in western Europe.

Economically, east European countries are likely to benefit from the general scaling down of prices of export goods from countries cutting their money rates, he said.

Moscow's reaction was shown in an Izvestia editorial on Sunday anticipating devaluation of the pound. It said devaluation was a tool of "Wall Street bosses" to bring about "liquidation of the sterling block and subjection of the pound to the dollar."

The Communist Party described devaluation as a "brutal" attack on "real wages in Britain," and a method of enabling Wall Street millionaires to buy up British industries at less cost.

Laborites See Better Times

On the other hand, the Labor government set out to sell the public on the idea that the cheaper pound will lead to better times.

James Griffiths, national insurance minister, told a National Party rally at Filey:

"We are solving this problem as a nation seeking to share the burden, calling on everyone. Stand by the government. We know we are in for a tough job, but we are convinced that we can do it."

A British treasury spokesman said the sterling price of gold has been set at 250 shillings ($35) a fine ounce troy. Until yesterday the gold price in sterling was 172 shillings 3 pence. The increase represented an increase to South Africa's gold mines of about $10.90 an ounce.

While Britain's bank and exchanges closed for the day to absorb the devaluation shock, 2000 brokers shouted and gestured in an open air market in Throckmorton st. In the wild confusion they added tens of millions of pounds value to gold and other shares.

The government suspended its sales of cotton, copper, lead, zinc, tin and aluminum. The government buys all such supplies from abroad and resells it to the manufacturers. Presumbaly new and higher prices will be fixed for British buyers and sales resumed Thursday.

Housewives rushed to buy flour and cheese—most of which is imported. Bread and flour prices will rise soon because wheat is bought with more expensive dollars.

Most merchants limited customers to a few pounds of flour.

Sales of most other goods generally were normal throughout Britain, however.

Politicians anxiously sought to assess the effect on the people. Most observers felt that the full shock of devaluation would not reach the people for many months. Britain has stockpiles of cotton and tobacco, for example, which could last for several months.

Sir Stafford, in speaking to what probably was the biggest news conference in the history of the Treasury, was so cautious that newspapers were hard-pressed to find a headline in it.

Although he warned that no miracle was to be expected, he said he thought that "in a period of time we shall increase our exports. That is fairly clear from the reaction in America already."

Hints Softer Attitude

He gave just a hint of softening toward private industry, sections of which the Labor Government has nationalized.

"We realize that conditions have changed in the matter of capital investment and that we must study the problems of incentive and suitable environment to capital investment," he said.

He added that the government probably will cut spending for capital investment next year, but he ruled out any cuts in spending for national defense or social services, such as the national health service.

Cripps said the price of the pound was dropped all the way down to $2.80 because "we decided to be quite certain that we put it down to a point where it could be held and there would be no need to move it again."

He said it would have been an "impossible operation" to turn the pound free and let it find its own level because "you have got a whole series of fixed exchange rates all over the world."

He added that devaluation might lead eventually to the pound being made freely convertible into other currencies.

Although Cripps had urged that wage increases be ruled out in the interest of keeping Britain's export prices down, union pressure continued.

The shop steward's council of the Engineering and Allied Trades—representing three million workers who want a raise of a pound a week—said: "The cost of living can be expected to rise by 6 or 7 per cent in the near future. The one pound rise is needed more urgently than ever."

funds can then be used, with American Government consent, for productive projects or for cutting down the internal debt.

Since each dollar of American aid to Britain will be equivalent to 30 percent more shillings and pounds—and presumably more francs and lire as France and Italy devalue—the counterpart funds are expected to play an even bigger part than formarly in pushing European recovery.

Hoffman was asked whether some of these local currency funds could not be loaned to the World Bank, to be reloaned for development projects in underdeveloped countries. He replied that this was one of the subjects he intended to discuss soon with Eugene R. Black, the Bank's president.

Meanwhile Britain and the other sterling countries were expected to ask the International Monetary Fund for permission to draw a total of about 540 million dollars to replenish their dollar reserves.

Under the Fund's rules, a member country can draw up to one quarter of its subscribed quota in any year to offset temporary pressure on its currency. The Fund has ruled, however, that countries getting dollar help under the Marshall Fund could not get additional dollars in this way.

As long as the pound stood at $4.03, moreover, the British could hardly have argued that their difficulties were temporary. Now they can go to the Fund for relief as soon as the dust of this week's devaluations settles down.

Britain's limit of permissible drawings from the Fund this year is 325 million dollars. In addition, Australia can draw 50 million, Denmark 17 million, Egypt 15 million, Finland 9½ million, India 100 million and South Africa 25 million.

This makes a total of more than half a billion dollars which, if the Fund gave permission, could be used as a sort of stabilization fund to bolster the new values of the sterling currencies.

Officials here look to the British cabinet to make important decisions of domestic economic policy, now that devaluation is out of the way.

At least three moves are expected:

(1) Cuts in imports of foodstuffs and other important materials from dollar areas. Early in the summer Cripps put a virtual stop-order on such imports. Now he knows, as a result of devaluation, that dollar imports will cost 30 percent more. He knows, too, as a result of his talks in Washington, that he is free to switch to non-dollar sources of these imports without risking a charge of discrimination against American goods.

(2) Economies in British government spending, so as to ease the pressure of taxation on British business. Prime Minister Attlee has already asked his ministers informally to plan cuts of 5 percent in the budgets of their respective departments.

(3) A gradual cut in the proportion of the British national income that now goes into capital improvement, such as building and public works. The British do not intend to stop projects now under way, but rather those that would otherwise get started by September of next year.

On one issue of enormous importance the British government still has no plan of action, as far as can be learned here. This is the question of the sterling balances, amounting to 13½ billion dollars, held in London by India and other countries largely as payment for British debts incurred in wartime.

The holders of these sterling funds have been drawing heavily on them by taking British goods. The British have been prevented thereby from selling these goods to dollar-earning areas. The American-British-Canadian agreement of last week called for "further study" of this problem, but offered no plan for solving it.

For political reasons, among others, the British feel they cannot shut off this flow of goods to India, Egypt and their other sterling creditors. Yet they know, too, that the drain of goods to these areas simply cannot go on unchecked.

World Bank and Export-Import Bank dollar loans to India and other holders of sterling balances would give these countries machinery and other goods they have been getting from Britain. To this extent dollar loans would ease some of the pressure on the British economy.

Apparently the British are looking to the United States to come up with some proposal on the subject. So far, however, there is none in sight, and only the most vague and general "study" of the problem in Government offices here. American ideas on the subject may be clearer by the time Prime Minister Nehru of India, the biggest single holder of sterling balances, reaches Washington on an official visit next month.

Paris Devalues Franc to 350 For $1, Fixes Ratio to Pound

Paris, Sept. 19 (AP).—France liberated its franc tonight to find its place on the free market in relation to the dollar, with the expectation that it will be valued at about 350 to $1.

The dollar has been bringing 330 francs under favorable conditions of trading in the last few weeks. The action, therefore, is a devaluation.

The government announced its decision after a cabinet meeting of nearly four hours. A government spokesman emphasized belief that the 350-franc rate would result.

The cabinet did fix a strict ratio for franc-pound trading, 980 francs to one pound. That, under the new $2.80 pound, converts into 350 francs to the dollar. The pound is not on the free market in France, but the moneys of the United States, Belgium, Portugal, and Switzerland are.

The decision on the pound and the change in the value of the dollar meant that the pound has dropped 10 per cent in terms of the franc, while the dollar has gained 6 per cent on the free market and 27 per cent on commercial transactions.

Besides the free market rate, France has had a commercial exchange rate of 272 francs to $1. This will be abolished. The government will ask the International Monetary Fund for permission to place all commercial operations fully on the free market rate. Besides the free market and commercial rates, France has had an "official" rate of 214 francs to $1.

The actions are designed to help French exporters compete with British goods in the United States market, but it will increase the prices of wheat and coal imported from dollar areas.

As the cabinet met Paul Reynaud, war-time premier, denounced Britain's devaluation as an unfriendly act toward France. Reynaud, who is chairman of the 12-nation consultative assembly of the Council of Europe, charged that Britain had taken the step without consulting her partners in the council. He said the British action showed "a lack of that European solidarity which the British government recently pledged by its presence at the Council of Europe."

The cabinet met with President Vincent Auriol. Finance Minister Maurice Petsche who had just returned from Washington, reported on his financial discussions there.

French and Others Cut Currency Value except the dollar will be announced in three days.

ITALY—An extraordinary five-hour cabinet meeting resulted in suspension of all dealings in foreign currencies and an announcement no change would be made in the policy of "defense of the buying power of the lira." Financial circles believed some adjustment would have to be made in the value of the lira despite government assurances that no extensive repercussions were expected. In Milan the lira fell to 655 to the dollar from a low of 625 on Saturday. In November, 1947, the government pegged the lira to a fluctuating rate of between 570 to 650 to the dollar.

German Council Meets

GERMANY—The West German Central Baking Council met at Bad Godesberg with American, British and French officials to discuss a possible lower rate for the westmark. The present rate is 30 cents. No decision was announced. Another meeting will be held Tuesday. All state banks suspended dealing in foreign currency. The occupation powers would have the final right to approve a new rate.

THE NETHERLANDS — The Dutch cabinet set a new dollar rate for the guilder but held off announcement of the new rate until 8 a. m. (Eastern Standard Time) Tuesday. Spokesmen in Batavia said the guilder in Indonesia would be kept in line with the guilder in Holland. All Netherlands price were frozen at their September 17 level.

BELGIUM — Stock exchanges were closed—and some sources said the Belgian franc might be devalued in the future, especially if devaluation of the Dutch currency reverses the trade trends between the Benelux countries (Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg). Prime Minister Gaston Eyskens declared Belgian currency is solid.

SWITZERLAND—The government announced that the gold parity of the Swiss franc, one of the firmest moneys in Europe, would remain unchanged for the time being. Financial sources said they expected devaluation eventually would be necessary.

ARGENTINA—Bank trading in foreign exchange was suspended until further notice. Banking circles cifculated reports the peso would be devalued. The cabinet and economic council were expected to meet promptly, Dr. Ramen Cerejio, Minister of the Treasury and president of the National Economic Council, said Britain would have to pay 30 percent more pounds for her Argentine meat under their trade agreement as a result of Britain's devaluation. The British Embassy disputed that statement.

PORTUGAL—The Bank of Portugal issued no exchange rate so no one could make foreign currency transactions legally. Financiers would not hazard a guess as to whether the government would devalue the escudo. Gold bars, bought Saturday for 43 escudos, were selling for 45 to 50.

SPAIN—All banks were ordered to suspend trading in the pound, pending a government decision on a new rate for the peseta. Many British tourists were stranded by inability to exchange sterling and travelers' checks.

SOUTH AFRICA—A midday order froze prices of all commodities following wild speculation. Though the stock exchange was closed following devaluation of the South African pound to the same extent as the British pound, a black market developed in gold and other shares. Clients offered brokers working behind closed doors up to 50 percent on low-grade mine shares. A buying rush in gold, manganese, copper, chrome and diamond mining shares was expected at the opening of the stock exchange Tuesday. The Chamber of Mines estimated the gold output this year was worth 50 million pounds more than Sunday. Land values around Johannesburg rose 10 percent Monday morning.

BERMUDA — Businessmen expected an influx of American tourists because of the cheaper pound.

FINLAND—The government devalued the mark from 160 to the dollar to 231. Foreign currency transactions were discontinued temporarily.

ICELAND—The government devalued the kroner in line with the British pound.

POLAND—A new exchange rate for the zloty had not been set and British visitors exchanged their pounds at the old rate.

ATHENS—The stock exchange and banks were closed. Premier Alexander Diomedes said the government would have to take action to meet the situation.

ISRAEL—The effect of the 7-percent devaluation of Israeli pounds was almost unfelt. Banks and exchanges did a normal business.

EGYPT—Banks and stock and cotton exchanges were closed until Wednesday. Long-staple cotton soared in curb transactions.

SYRIA—Syria kept her piaster at 220 to the dollar, but announced the pound is only worth 613 piasters compared to the old rate of 883.

MALAYA—The Singapore and Malaya governments set a new rate for the Malayan dollar at 32½ cents, as against the old rate of 46¾ cents. A bank holiday was to end Tuesday. The rubber market closed steady at 43¾ Malayan cents as against 36⅞ cents Saturday.

INDIA—The local Calcutta government ordered the banks, treasury and stock exchange to close for three days to prevent speculation. Prices of American goods rose up to 30 percent at Bombay.

AUSTRALIA—Australian banks and the stock exchange opened as usual, but traded only in dollars and pounds. Wool prices at Sydney rose 5 to 10 percent.

PAKISTAN—Commercial circles expect Pakistan government to announce devaluation after cabinet meeting today (Tuesday). The sterling area accounts for 60 percent of Pakistan's exports and imports.

Boost in Travel Trade Seen in Cut of Pound

The devaluation of the pound should bring a decided increase in American tourist trade in England, to the benefit of all Englishmen, Sir Harold Boulton declared yesterday.

Sir Harold

As chief representative in North America for the British Travel Association, Sir Harold was in Washington to sell local travel agents and transportation officials on the advantages of visiting his country.

"The majority of Englishmen do not resent the American tourist coming in and more or less living off the fat of the land—buying gasoline and other luxuries which the Britisher can't get. The average Englishman realizes that the American tourist's dollars are his salvation," he explained.

Prior to the devaluation, announced over the weekend, Great Britain expected an all-time high of about 130,000 American tourists to visit there during 1949, spending some 72 million dollars. As a result of the devaluation, that number should increase about 30 per cent, Sir Harold predicted.

The American tourist probably will benefit more than any one else from the devaluation, since his dollar will buy 30 per cent more than it did before in both service and goods, he said .The average tourist could do well on $10 a day and very well on $15 a day in England. Now he will be able to do as well on $7 to $10 a day, he said.

He predicted there will be an increase in prices in England, but they will not come anywhere near a 30 per cent increase and they will come gradually over a long period of time.

Sir Harold said he did not know what effect the devaluation would have on the cost of air and boat travel to and from England, since transportation costs will have to be worked out later by transportation companies in both countries.

HOW TO SELECT A DANCING SCHOOL

Anyone can operate a dance studio. No examination, no license is required. Even a person who knows nothing about dancing—or teaching—can hang out his shingle and profess to teach dancing "a new way." So be careful—ask these questions:

1. Who is the actual owner of the school? What experience does he have in teaching dancing?
2. Will you learn simple steps that you can do on a crowded floor?
3. Will you learn the fundamentals of good dancing—or waste your money learning novelty routines?

Arthur Murray's teaching methods are those developed through his 35 years' experience. Only socially correct steps are taught. Your dancing will look expert and smooth wherever you go.

Dollar Area Cuts Follow Devaluation

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—Lower dollar prices for many raw materials and finished products in most of the world emerged today from the wringer of devaluation.

The squeezing of prices in the first business day following devaluation fell far short of the 30.5 per cent by which Britain and other countries reduced the dollar value of their money.

What will be the extent of the thorough shake-up of price structures remained to be determined.

There were many factors yet to be fitted into the pattern—how much manufacturing costs abroad may rise and the effect of such charges as distribution and shipping costs on eventual retail sales prices.

Small Reductions Here

First reaction in United States markets was relatively limited.

Lower prices were paid for many commodities, including wool and wool tops, rubber, hides and cocoa, sold on contracts for future delivery.

But the reductions were generally small, in terms of total price.

At the same time, Britain and those who followed her in devaluing currencies had to pay more in their markets.

Rubber Prices Higher

Rubber prices at Singapore were marked up nearly 7 Malayan cents a pound. Australian wool prices at the Sydney auctions moved up 5 to 10 percent in terms of the devalued Australian money.

What price benefit on imported goods the American consumer may derive will depend on the eventual balance reached between prices on foreign and domestic markets.

One imported in New York predicted a 10 to 20 per cent drop in prices of British woolens sold here; imported whiskies might show a smaller drop; a New York dealer cut 20 per cent from prices of British automobiles, without waiting to see what their manufacturers would do to their selling list; a chinaware importer forecast "a reduction—we don't know how much."

Selling Burst Fades

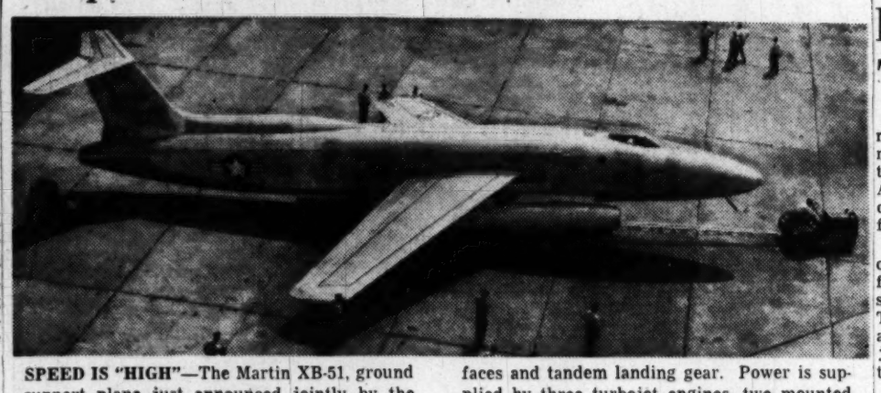
Trading in stock shares here and abroad reflected business views of prospects in the economic shakeup.

On Wall Street, an initial burst of selling faded out, but final quotations were a few cents to $1 a share lower. Disputes in coal and steel industries were credited with affecting market sentiment perhaps more than the devaluation, although the British move could give American producers more competition generally.

Gold mining stock prices went up everywhere—in New York, at London's open-air market, in similar "black market" dealings at Johannesburg, and on Toronto and Montreal exchanges. The British treasury increase the gold price to 250 shillings a fine ounce, a rise of about 45 percent.

Foreign exchange dealings in many currencies were at a standstill pending official setting of devalued rates. But an active business developed at New York in conversion of British pounds into United States dollars at the new rate of about $2.80 to the pound.

Wraps Taken Off New Jet Plane . . .



SPEED IS "HIGH"—The Martin XB-51, ground support plane just announced jointly by the National Military Establishment and the Glenn L. Martin Co., shows unusual features in sharply swept-back wings, T-shaped control surfaces and tandem landing gear. Power is supplied by three turbojet engines, two mounted on pylons on the lower sides of the fuselage, the third in the rear. Only indication of speed was the announcement it is "high"

3-Engine Jet Developed for Tactical Use

The Air Force yesterday announced completion of an experimental three-engine jet bomber, the XB-51, designed to answer the Army's demand for more emphasis on tactical air support of ground forces.

Built by the Glenn L. Martin Co. of Baltimore, the XB-51 has an 80-foot fish-like fuselage with wings swept back at a 35-degree angle. Two powerful turbo-jet engines are mounted beneath the fuselage just forward of the wings, and a third turbo-jet is in the tail.

The Air Force has ordered two of the experimental models for test flights beginning about October 20.

Performance characteristics are still secret, but the sharply streamlined design indictates that the bomber will operate at speeds above 600 miles an hour.

The Air Force hopes it will answer the need for a fast, short-range plane which can be used for light bombardment and strafing of enemy troop columns in support of ground forces.

The Army has complained in the past that the Air Force was so wrapped up in strategic bombing by "intercontinental" planes of the B-36 type that it was not sufficiently emphasizing new developments in tactical air support.

The XB-51 has a wingstan of 55 feet and is 17 feet high.

The cabin is pressurized, indicating the plane is expected to operate at high altitudes.

The XB-51 is designed to carry a crew of two, the pilot and a radio-navigator.

Russia Agrees to Discuss Austria Treaty on Thursday

By The Associated Press

Russia belatedly agreed yesterday on a new attempt to settle the long east-west dispute over Austria's future.

Talks will open in New York on Thursday.

American officials expressed some skepticism over the outcome, but said the discussions may provide a clew to Russia's immediate intentions in the cold war.

A formal treaty restoring Austria to full independence would require the withdrawal of all occupation forces in Austria and also of Soviet troops elsewhere in eastern Europe.

By agreement with her wartime Western Allies, Russia is permitted to station trops in Hungary and Romania only to keep lines of communication open with Soviet forces in Austria. As soon as the Austrian peace treaty is signed, there will be no further excuse for Russia to keep troops in the two neighboring countries.

However, some officials here said they suspect Russia may be unwilling to withdraw these troops in the present stage of the Kremlin's feud with Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia.

Earlier negotiations for an Austrian treaty broke off in London on September 1. At that time, Secretary of State Acheson charged the Russians had failed to carry out previous agreements and cast doubt on their good faith.

The State Department said Russia agreed to renew the discussions when United States Ambassador Alan G. Kirk, along with the British and French envoys at Moscow, called on acting Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in the Soviet capital yesterday.

British Auto Dealers Here Slash Prices

Price slashes averaging 20 percent on 23 makes of British cars sold here will take effect today on the heels of the devaluation of the pound.

The cars range from the Austin, sold previously at $1495, to a Rolls Royce for which some people used to pay up to $22,000.

In a different class of items on all British-published books was announced yesterday by Whyte Book Shop and Galley, Inc., 1518 Connecticut ave., a large importer.

Just what effect the automobile price cuts will have in increasing British car sales here remains to be seen.

The markdown of a black-and-red Rolls Bentley sedanca-devile convertible with Gurney-Nutting body and built-in bar from $19,600 to $15,680 or so is not expected quite to flood the streets of Washington with such models, but it may win a few more buyers.

Already reduced yesterday were such numbers as the Hillman Minx, from $1799 to $1495, and the Sunbeam Talbot, the Humber and the Humber Hawk—previously retailing for $2995, $6000 and $8000, respectively.

Soviet Threat Cited as Senate Opens Debate on Military Aid being pressed by Senator John J. Sparkman (D. Ala.).

Driving for swift action, Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) scheduled a Senate night session tonight. Lucas hopes to get a final vote on the bill by Thursday.

Connally told the Senate Russia's big peacetime army "cannot be aimed against anyone except the United States."

"Everyone knows that when Russia thinks the hour is here, she will strike, and will strike with all her power to crush democracy and free governments everywhere on earth," said the Texan.

Connally predicted the United States will continue to win the cold war but foresaw a "long, bitter road full of steep hills and unpleasant detours."

He said weakness invites aggressive war and the United States cannot afford to permit friendly nations to remain weak, or be picked off "one by one like pigeons in a shooting gallery."

He told the Senate it would be an "impossible task" to give Europe complete military security in 12 months and said the program wasn't designed for that purpose.

But he said the initial year's program will help treaty nations to arm existing units effectively and "when we eventually reach our goal we will have a much stronger combined defense force than we could possibly produce with each nation pursuing its own independent objectives."

Both Connally and Tydings directed their fire at the economy-bloc drive to cut the program.

Connally said it would be "extremely difficult to put a price tag on world peace" and Tydings said a severe cut might render the whole program valueless.

Maintaining effective aid could be rendered without voting the precise amounts named in the bill, George clashed sharply with Tydings.

As Tyings' voice rose, George took his seat, saying he couldn't debate "against noise."

"Not when it's supported by logic," snapped Tydings.

The Marylander meanwhile disclosed he will leave for Europe Wednesday on a four-week tour of Europe to study Western Europe defense plans.

He issued a statement saying the whole philosophy of American preparedness has been altered by the Atlantic pact's "one-for-all" pledge.

"In the future we must consider not only the defense of our own country but our obligations under the North Atlantic Security Pact," he said.

"This trip will give me an opportunity to acquire a lot of valuable information which should be of great importance to Congress and our people in the formulation of our preparedness program."

In the Senate Tydings estimated it might take up to five years to organize and effectively arm the 40 to 50 European divisions necessary to fight a successful holding action or possibly turn back an aggressor.

He named Bradley, "the best witness in Christendom," as the source of his figures on the number of divisions needed. At the present he said there is no ground army worthy of the name between Russia and Western Europe. He said the program would give the United States the most valuable weapon of all, "T-I-M-E."

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich) directed a series of questions designed to bring out that the program wasn't geared to any specific number of divisions.

Tydings conceded this but again stressed that building up of an effective ground army in Europe should be the initial goal. He said it was "illusory thinking" to count too heavily on our air power and the atomic bomb.

British Export Jump Seen

the suit at $75—a considerable reduction from the original $90.

Devaluation means that the British, to earn the same number of dollars, will have to sell more goods. Conversely, they're going to have to pay more in pounds for American wheat, cotton, tobacco, zinc, lead and other United States supplies. The cost of raw materials in Great Britain will rise. So will the cost of living. That's the great problem confronting Prime Minister Attlee and Cripps.

How Will Unions Act?

The economic consequences are clear enough. Britons have to work harder to earn less. Devaluation is recognitive of further austerity. The decision comes just when British labor is restive. Railway workers have been miffed because a conciliation board refused a wage boost. They have decided to work-to-rule, which means following every letter of the working codes. It's tantamount to a slowdown in the United States.

It raises the cost of production, yet Cripps in his speech to the British warned that increased productivity is the country's economic salvation. The Council of the Trades Union Congress, which roughly is to British labor what a combined AFL-CIO would be to United States labor, undoubtedly will indorse the government's action, but whether labor leaders will be able to restrain their members, already grousing for more money because of high living costs, is not yet predictable.

Implications for U. S.

For the United States the implications are:

(1) Once and for all the international supremacy of the dollar is established. Gradually over the years more and more currencies will tend to drift away from the pound to tie to the dollar. That will deprive Britain of a source of earning power in international markets.

(2) United States manufacturers face tougher competition at home. Obviously British producers are now able to meet United States prices more easily. The incentive to sell in the United States market has been increased. Contrarily the incentive to sell in soft sterling currency areas is decreased. There's no chance of boosting prices in terms of pounds in sterling countries, but there is in the United States.

(3) United States agriculture may find it harder to sell in world markets. The sterling prices of wheat, tobacco, cotton will rise. This increascs the pressure on the Agriculture Department and the farmer to readjust to realities in the postwar world.

(4) The United States must now justify its all-powerful economic niche in world affairs. As a creditor nation it must buy more from the rest of the world than it sells.

Reversing history, the United States must adopt Great Britain's role of the eighteenth, nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. The United States must expand investments abroad to make dollars available to the rest of the world.

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder has promised that the United States would rise to its responsibility of lowering tariffs and easing customs policies. But, if sales of goods from Britain and other sterling area countries put pressure on United States prices and employment, will manufacturers, labor unions and Congressmen demand the raising of tariff barriers? Will we repeat the Hawley-Smoot boner of 1930, which aggravated the world depression of the 30s?

For the British, devaluation will mean temporary relief. In recent months potential buyers of British goods held off buying in the expectation that the pound would be devalued and they'd be able to get lower prices. At the same time Britons and Americans with dollars, who had use for sterling, put off conversion also in expectation of devaluation. The result was a scissors pressure against the pound.

Now the movement away from sterling ought to be reversed. Temporarily shorts will rush to cover gold, and dollar reserves of the British Treasury will increase. As another factor, production of gold in South Africa and other British Empire countries ought to be stimulated. Gold will bring a better price in sterling. Therefore profits in sterling will rise. This, incidentally, will tend to placate South Africa which has been wanting the nUited States to increase its buying price.

Whether benefits of devaluation are longer lasting depends on the British government's power to control the voters. Within the Labor Party Cripps has indicated he will not undertake to subsidize the increase in the cost of living resulting from devaluation. He promised to keep government expenditures under control. That implies gradual elimination of import quotas and subsidies to British manufacturers. If so, it means permitting prices to function in their traditional role of helping men and countries to exchange goods and service to mutual advantage. It means that Britain ultimately will revert to the policy of buying in the cheapest markets and selling in the dearest according to the precepts of Adam Smith.

For Attlee and Cripps the danger is that pressure from the unions will prove too strong. They may yield and try to insulate workers against higher living costs. They may try to prevent any fall in the standard of living. In that case devaluation, which contrives to make it harder for Britons to buy from abroad and easier to sell, will be an abortive gesture. But for Attlee and Cripps time's winged chariot is hurrying near. The general election is less than a year away.

Throughout Britain the announcement was profoundly sobering. People realized that Cripps to recant if the nation's economic could never have brought himself plight had not been compellingly grave.

As I ate breakfast in my hotel I watched Britons intently, grimly, reading their papers. I couldn't help thing—"it's so still, you can hear the pounds drop."

There's this relief: The uncertainty that has harassed the world of commerce has now been indexed. We no longer face the suspense of devaluation; we face its consequences.

Canada Dollar Down 10%

Ottawa, Ontario, Sept. 19 (AP).—Canada slashed one tenth off the value of her currency tonight, becoming the nineteenth nation to devalue war-inflated money within 30 hours.

A Canadian buying United States dollars here will have to pay 110½ cents for them, instead of the 110-cent rate that has held since 1946. Canadians selling United States dollars here will obtain 110 cents.

The change, effective at the start of business tomorrow, was announced in the House of Commons tonight by Douglas Abbott, Finance Minister, who represented Canada at the British-American dollar talks in Washington.

This means that Canadians will have to put up more of their dollars to buy United States goods and may cut imports. In turn, Canadian goods sold in the United States will go at a greater discount than at present. Canadian dollars were at discount of several cents in the United States, even before the British devaluation. In Canada, however, the dollars have been dealt in since 1946 on a par basis.

Abbott said Canada's skimpy reserves of American funds made devaluation necessary. Canada might have had to go into an era of deficit trading if it did not devalue, he said.

The 30 percent slash in the price of British pound "cannot fail to have important implications for our balance of payments position," Abbott said, with Canadian exports "bound to face increased price competition in both the non-dollar and dollar markets."

Abbott declared the various exchange adjustments will tend to increase Canadian exports. He said the 10 percent devaluation, as contrasted to Britain's 30, was all that was deemed necessary here.

The newly established exchange rate is the same that existed from 1939 to 1946. At that time the British pound was quoted in Canada at about $4.50.

Abbott fixed the price of the British pound at $3.01¼ (Canadian) buying and $3.08¾ selling. The pound is now worth only $2.80 in American money, since the British devaluation yesterday.

Many Canadians anticipated the action, rushing to put their money into stocks during the day. Orders for gold-mining shares flooded the trading floor at Toronto. The exchange's gold index, made up of representative shares, went up almost 10 percent, to a two-year high. The reason was that Canada sells gold for $35 in United States currency. Thus devaluation here would make the American money worth that much more.

Vishinsky Appeals For Cooperation

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky today smilingly urged United Nations members to cooperate with each other.

This gesture was made by the chief Russian delegate as he arrived by plane from Europe. He and other diplomats from around the globe came here for the fourth United Nations Assembly opening Tuesday at 10 a. m. (EST.).

Statement Quotes Stalin

Instead of brushing newsmen aside with a customary "no comment," Vishinsky pulled out a statement and said:

"The Soviet delegation is fully confident that the United Nations is, as the head of the Soviet government, Stalin, said, a serious instrument for the maintenance of peace and international security.

"There can be no doubt that the General Assembly would be able to solve the important problems before it providing the nations of the U. N. show a sincere desire to cooperate with each other and in accordance with the principles of the U. N. Charter."

Noting this statement, some other delegates decided they would wait for Vishinsky's opening speech to the General Assembly, perhaps late this week or early next week, to see how far the Russians affable manner will go.

General Debate Wednesday

The general debate, in which the chief delegates make the opening policy speeches of their delegations for the Assembly, will begin Wednesday.

Carlos P. Romulo, Philippine delegate, is expected to be elected president of the Assembly Tuesday morning. His backers say they have enough votes to elect him and he has no real opposition.

Acheson, arriving at LaGuardia Field from Washington, said he was "delighted" with Vishinsky's statement.

"It sounds encouraging," Acheson said. "I shall be glad to see him. I am always glad to see Mr. Vishinsky."

He added that "I am confident that we will all reach some solution."

Czechs Hold 200 Priests, Report Says

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 19 (U.P.).—The Czechoslovak government has arrested more than 200 Roman Catholic priests in Bohemia and Moravia, including a special vicar of Archbishop Josef Beran, a responsible church source said tonight.

Earlier, the official Czech news agency announced that Theodor Funk, secretary of Archbishop Josef Matocha, had been sentenced to 10 years imprisonment for "high treason" by the Prague state court. Matocha is Czechoslovakia's second highest prelate, ranking next to Beran. Funk was convicted of circulating leaflets to priests urging them to carry out the Vatican's order to excommunicate Communists.

The church source said that Dominican prior Jiri Maria Vesely had been arrested and "in recent weeks a whole series of priests" were thrown into jail.

The source listed among those arrested Jan Machac, Beran's special vicar in the area, two Black Friar monks of the Sokolovo monastery and Father Jaroslav Feix.

It said the police also arrested a member of Archbishop Beran's staff—Counselor Dr. Antonin Culik—and Father Vilem Vondray, chaplain of St. Henry's Church, Prague.

Meanwhile, a Communist lawyers' publication said that Slovaks who fought with fists and scythes last June to defend their Catholic priests would be tried for "crimes of rebellion."

The Bratislava monthly publication Pravo a Zivot (Law and Life) indicated that the trials may already have begun. It gave no indication of the number arrested.

The maximum penalty for "crimes of rebellion" is death.

In the June disturbances, peasants beat Communist local committeemen and fought soldiers and troops whom they feared had come to arrest priests in the Zilinia area.

Korea Appeals to U. N. For Military Help

Lake Success, N. Y., Sept. 19 (U.P.).—The Republic of Korea appealed to the United Nations today for military aid to protect it from communism.

The republic, which occupies the southern half of the split nation, asked the General Assembly to authorize one or more western powers to send arms so it can "cope with the critical security situation by the Communist expansion in China."

It also asked the U. N. as a whole to guarantee its security, and called for strengthening of the U. N. watchdog commission, which reported recently that raids from the Communist-dominated northern zone were increasing.

became "clear" the Red army would liberate that area.

He said he made contact with Dulles in Switzerland in 1944, when the latter was European director of the OSS.

"In 1944, when it was clear that some parts of Europe would be liberated by the Soviets, Dulles concentrated on organizing spies among the groups in Switzerland from these countries. They were to organize activity against the Communist Party at home," Szonyi said.

"Dulles explained his program at length to me. He said that because those Eastern countries, which would be liberated by the Russians, would be led by the Communist parties, work must be done within the parties."

He claimed that Dulles sent him 4000 Swiss francs (about $1000) before he left Switzerland. Later, he said, he and others received 200 to 300 Swiss francs from Dulles "occasionally."

The espionage trial of the eight defendants — seven Hungarians and a Yugoslav—was nearing its climax following the marathon confessions of guilt by all of the defendants in less than 15 hours total testimony.

Some of them confessed so rapidly that the court had to ask them to slow down. One of them not only confessed to everything but took time to cross-examine himself, asking, "Why did I commit treason?" and then explaining.

From Laszlo Rajk, former No. 2 Hungarian Communist and former Minister of Foreign Affairs, to Pal Justus, former member of Parliament, the pattern scarcely varied.

Only Lazar Brankov, former Counselor at the Yugoslav Legation in Budapest, entered a plea of "partially guilty." He pleaded guilty to charges of espionage and treason but objected to a charge he was responsible for the murder of an anti-Tito student in Budapest.

MP's Stop Seizure Of Axles by Reds

Berlin, Sept. 19 (U.P.).—American military police and western German police rushed to an elevated railway station in the American sector today to prevent Soviet-controlled railway police from seizing more equipment, a United States Military Government official said.

Charles C. Bond, head of the military government's Berlin police branch, said the police were sent to the station after six freight cars loaded with railway axles were taken away by eastern railway police and employes of the Soviet-controlled railway.

United States military police headquarters said 1 American officer and 10 soldiers were sent there. Headquarters said five more cars loaded with axles were at the station.

A short time later the eastern policemen left the station and returned to the Soviet sector. The United States deputy provost marshal withdrew all but six military policemen, whom he ordered to remain at the station all night with six German policemen.

Meanwhile, Maj. Gen. George P. Hays, deputy American military governor, protested to the Russians against "brutal, inhuman treatment" he said they had inflicted on an American soldier while they kept him prisoner for 10 months.

The soldier, Pfc. John J. Sienkiewicz of Baltimore, Md., escaped from a Soviet prison in Berlin last Friday.

Hays charged that Sienkiewicz's detention "is a clear violation of an American-Soviet agreement to return American and Soviet nationals arrested in Germany by either side.

Hays quoted Sienkiewicz as saying he was beaten and kicked by Soviet soldiers.

Conflicting reports said that eight to 11 persons had been killed in rioting in three villages surrounding Ansermanueve. Numerous others were reported injured.

Bonn Cabinet Snarled Over 3 Ministries

Bonn, Germany, Sept. 19 (U.P.).—Chancellor Konard Adenauer of western Germany encountered last-minute difficulties today in efforts to complete his new cabinet.

Odenauer and representatives of the three right-wing parties—the Christian Democrats, the Free Democrats and the German Party—had agreed on 10 cabinet choices. But they failed to reach complete agreement during weekend talks on whether there should be 13 ministries, and, if so, who would fill the three additional posts.

Adenauer, himself a Christian Democrat, must submit his cabinet list to President Theodor Heuss before Tuesday.

The three posts in question are the ministries of food, labor and interior. Adenauer could not agree with his own party leaders on the personnel for those posts.

The following cabinet posts, however, had been approved: Vice Chancellor and ERP Minister, Franz Bleucher (Free Democrats); Economics, Ludwig Erhard (Christian Democratic Union); Finance, Fritz Shaeffer (CDU); Posts, Hans Schuberth (CDU); All-German Affairs, Jakob Kaiser (CDU); Refugees, Franz Likaschek (CDU); Transport, Hans Seebohm (German Party); Coordination, Heinrich Hellwege (German Party); Justice, Thomas Dehler (FDP); Reconstruction, Franz Wildermuth (FDP).

British, Canada May Ask More A-Bomb Data

By John M. Hightower
Associated Press Reporter

Britain and Canada are expected to urge on the United States a broader exchange of atomic secrets, in three power talks opening here today.

The United States for its part will request Britain and Canada to agree to give this country a maximum share of uranium ore out of the total production available to the Westen powers. This ore is the raw stuff of atomic bombs and the Western powers get most of what they have from the Belgian Congo.

The conference also may involve vitally important—but very hush - hush—strategic questions since the atomic bomb is a trump weapon in the arsenal of the West.

However, what these questions are—whether, for example, they include the possibility of stockpiling bombs in Britain—is a tight secret.

Monopoly Fading

In the background of the whole meeting, officials said yesterday, is the fact that America's absolute monopoly over the bomb is gradually running out. Britain is striving toward bomb production and American scientists believe she will be successful. As British and Canadian experiments are expanded they require more and more uranium.

The atomic conference stems originally from the wartime partnership of the three English-speaking nations in the research, development and production of atomic bombs. But it arises more immediately out of President Truman's conference at Blair House last July.

Mr. Truman himself disclosed what was up when he told a news conference on July 28 that the American-British-Canadian partnership was under review and that "exploratory conversations" among the three governments would be held.

Webb Gets Task

Since Secretary of State Dean Achenson is scheduled to be in New York for several days at the United Nations meeting the task of heading up the talks for the United States has fallen upon Undersecretary of State James Webb. On the committee with the Secretary of State are Defense Secretary Louis Johnson and David E. Lilienthal, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, who also may delegate their duties.

Britain will be represented in the talks by its Ambassador, Sir Oliver Franks, and its ranking Minister here, Sir Derick Hoyer Millar, while the Canadian member of the group is C. D. Howe.

These men form a permanent body called the combined policy committee which supervised Anglo-American-Canadian relations in the field of atomic energy. American officials frankly admit that for the past two years or so this committee has not been able to accomplish very much. This is because the various parts of the United States Government, mainly the State Department, the armed services and the Atomic Energy Commission and White House, have not always been able to agree on precisely what information should be shared with the British and Canadians.

Issue Nears Head

The issue is coming to a head now for several reasons. Three are probably of pjrimary importance:

1. The postwar agreement on which the United States-British-Canadian partnership rested and which covered the exchange of information and access to uranium production will run out soon; the date is a secret but the expiration reportedly falls around the first of the year.

2. Expanded British and Canadian experiments in the atomic energy field and the British government's announced interest in bomb production have made those countries increasingly dissatisfied with America's secrecy policy.

3. American officials themselves feel that the time has come to make some basic decisions on the extent of sharing information and also to nail down in a new and more permanent arrangement the American share of available raw materials.

Army Issues Denial On War Film Story

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Frank Capra, Hollywood movie producer, yesterday denied that the Army had asked him to complete a film portraying Nazi activities and the Nuremberg trials.

An Army spokesman, Col. George S. Eyster, had stated that the Army had asked Capra to finish a rough, incomplete Government film on the subject but that he had refused.

The statement was made in answer to charges that the Army had attempted to "suppress" the film by preventing its completion and issuance through regular movie channels in public theaters throughout the United States.

Instead, the Department of the Army is issuing the unfinished version as a Signal Corps 16-millimeter release available only to school, church and other nonprofit groups.

Commentators Protest

Such commentators as William B. Shirer and John Gunther have protested the action as "an evasion and subterfuge," aimed at preventing the bulk of the American public from seeing the film. Despite its rough, unfinished status, they declare the movie to be "magnificent" and "a masterpiece."

Army officials have denied any "suppression" and contended that they "couldn't find anyone willing to remake the picture" according to their ideas. Colonel Eyster stated specifically that it had been submitted to Capra with this in view.

"No one from the Army has approached me on the subject to my knowledge," Capra stated. "Certainly not within the past year."

Eyster's statement that the Department of the Army had tried to get Capra and others in Hollywood interested in the film had concerned the period since it was shipped from Germany last fall, he made plain.

"Certainly I would consider redoing the film if it were offered to me," said Capra. "I don't say what my decision would be, for of course this would depend upon timing, what I had in view at the moment and other things."

He added that he did not know ofanyone else in Hollywood being offered the film for completion and release.

Film Sought by Pare Lorentz

"In fact, this is the first I've heard of the matter," said Capra.

Another well-known maker of documentary movies, Pare Lorentz, has made repeated offers to the Army that he be leased the film for completion and showing.

The Army has no explanation why Lorentz's bids have been ignored. The latter, maker of such films as "The River" and "The Plow That Broke the Plains," has offered to complete the film at his own expense and submit the final version to the Army for approval or disapproval.

The unfinished film, entitled "Neurnberg"—Its Lesson for Today," has been shown in Germany to capacity audiences. Army officials cannot say why changes proposed by Associate Justice Robert Jackson of the United States Supreme Court, American prosecutor at Neurnberg, and Brig. Gen. Robert A. McClure, chief of the Army's civil affairs film division, never were made and the picture was issued in its original rough form. Completion of the film had been ordered by Secretary of War Robert Patterson and Gen. Lucius Clay.

Officially, all the Army will say is that it will cost $60,000 for them to complete and issue the picture themselves, and that they do not have the money for this. However, they have found the funds to issue it in its present form as a 16-millimeter production for limited showing at a cost of $30,000.

Unofficially, some officials declare that it is "inconsistent with present occupation policy" for an anti-Nazi film to be shown now to American audiences. The Army issued the following statement yesterday, following publication of a story on the subject by this newspaper:

"The film was made as an historical document to record permanently and accurately the trial of the Nazi leaders. As it was determined on July 1, 1949, that the film would be made available in the department of the Army's Signal Corps libraries throughout the United States for use, without charge, to show in its entirety to any audience interested in the subject. Requests for these 16-mm. films, now in the process of printing, may be directed to the signal officers of the Army areas after October 1, 1949, at which time the distribution of the prints will have been completed."

Antarctic Trip

Byrd's Plan Is Endorsed By Johnson

By Robert S. Allen

The only thing standing in the way of Admiral Richard Byrd's latest expedition to the Antarctic is one million dollars.

If the Navy can dig up that sum, the intrepid explorer is on his way.

He has Defense Secretary Johnson's word for it. Johnson has reversed a previous order by Navy Undersecretary Dan Kimball canceling the expedition.

Kimball took this action on the ground that heavy cuts in the Navy budget barred any further outlays for Byrd's expedition. Up to that time two million dollars had been spent readying a seven-ship, 3000-man task force. This unit is ready to shove off in a matter of days once it gets approval.

With Kimball's permission, Byrd took his case personally to Johnson. Byrd stressed the urgent need for the expedition, citing the fact that a number of Russian ships have been observed in the Antarctic. Also vessels from Britain, Chile and five other countries.

Johnson was sold. He reversed Kimball's cancellation, but left it up to the Navy to dig up the needed one million dollars.

After a two-hour private talk with Navy Secretary Francis Matthews, Byrd thinks a way will be found to provide the money. He cautiously describes his talk with Matthews as "highly encouraging."

Byrd's last visit to the South Pole was November, 1946-April, 1947.

Navy Officer's Death Is Ruled Suicide

Montgomery County Coroner J. F. Broschart yesterday issued a certificate of suicide due to an overdose of sleeping tablets in the death Thursday of Lieut. Norman James Wirth, 31, a Navy dental officer.

Lieutenant Wirth died at Bethesda Naval Hospital two days after he was found lying unconscious on the bathroom floor of his home at 2230 Washington ave., Silver Spring.

Civil Leaders Hear Talks by Defense Chiefs

Chiefs of the Nation's armed forces yesterday gave a seies of off-the-record talks to the Department of Defense's four orientation conferences for leaders of industry, labor, education, government, press and religion.

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson greeted the 80-odd civilians as they gathered at the Pentagon yesterday morning. Afteward they heard George F. Kennan, director of the State Department's policy planning staff, give "An Estimate of the International Situation."

Others who spoke were: Army Secretary Gordon Gray, Army Undersecretary Tracy S. Voorhees, Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army chief of staff, Navy Secretary Francis P. Matthews, Adm. Louis E. Denfeld, chief of naval operations, Gen. Clifton B. Cates, commandant of the Marine Corps, Air Force Secretary W. Stuart Symington, Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF chief of staff, and Maj. Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, director of the Joint Staff.

The group will hear another background talk today and then leave for field trips to Army and Air Force bases and then take a weekend cruise aboard the aircraft carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Socialite Drops Peace Warrant

Mrs. Caroline Hagner Shaw has withdrawn a peace bond warrant against her husband, John Francis Shaw.

Mrs. Shaw, publisher of "The Social List of Washington, D. C.," filed suit for a limited divorce in Montgomery County Circuit Court last month. She contended he drank too much, had assaulted her and subjected her to indignities.

A hearing on the warrant had been scheduled for today in Bethesda police court. Circuit court records showed that Shaw has not filed an answer to the divorce suit.

Reds Push Ahead North of Canton

Canton, China, Sept. 19 (AP).—The Chinese Nationalist defense ministry announced today that the Communists for the second time have captured Jucheng and Kweitung, 170 and 210 miles north of Canton.

Both points were just east of the railway that runs south to Canton and are in the general area where the Nationalists have said the Reds were assembling for a new campaign against the provisional capital.

The defense ministry also acknowledged Red capture of Pingtan Island, just off the mainland near Foochow and less than 100 miles from Formosa, after a hot battle of several days.

2 U. S. Cargo Ships Reach Red Shanghai

Shanghai, Sept. 19 (U.P.).—Arrival here of two American blockade runners may ease the Nationalist blockade of this Communist-held port, it was believed today.

Gangs of chanting coolies were busily unloading the biggest cargo of cotton and chemicals to enter Shanghai since the Nationalists clamped on the blockade during the summer.

The official Shanghai agents for the two ships, A. P. Pattison & Co., denied reports the two vessels had been escorted by an American destroyer to the entrance to the Yangtze River.

The ships were the Flying Independent and the Flying Clipper, owned by the Isbrandtsen Line of New York. The two fast black-and-white sister ships with small American flags fastened to their sides slipped in yesterday at almost the same time.

The Clipper, arriving from Hongkong, brought more than 4000 tons of freight and 800 bags of mail. The Independent, arriving from Tientsin in North China, had little freight and no mail.

The agents said both ships would sail for New York within a few days, carrying 10,000 tons of cargo, a few passengers and mail.

Peace in Caribbean Urged by Acheson

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—Secretary of State Acheson said tonight that the years of warlike turmoil in the broad Caribbean area must stop.

Acheson called on Latin America to join with the United States and end it. He made it clear this country will strongly oppose "aggression or plotting against any nation of this hemisphere."

"The security system which culminated in the Rio treaty is now facing a crucial test," the Secretary declared. This treaty among American republics pledges each to assist if another suffers armed attack.

Acheson made the Caribbean issue a cardinal point in an address stressing this country's determination to encourage the growth of democracy in this hemisphere and to extend a helping hand for economic development.

He gave a full dress review of this Nation's Latin-American policy before the largest gathering of top Latin-American diplomatic and economic leaders in many years. It was a dinner meeting of the Pan-American Society of the United States.

Acheson said that at times the entire Caribbean area has "approached a state of political turmoil." Formore than two years it has been disturbed by plots and counterplots and there have been increasingly "military adventures."

Only last Wednesday, a five-nation peace committee, including the United States, appealed to the American republics to rid themselves of the Caribbean Legion or other armed revolutionary groups. It called for observance of nonintervention.

Caribbean feuding has been marked by two attempts of the Legion to invade the Dominican Republic; an effort to bomb Caracas, the capital of Venezuela; a rebel invasion of Costa Rica from Nicaragua, and gun running for revolutionary plots.

Wherever aggression or plotting against any nation of the hemisphere occurs or is threatened, "we shall use our strongest efforts, in keening with our international commitments, to oppose it," he said.

Acheson welt at length on the controversial subject of diplomatic recognition of revolutionarly governments in Latin America.

"Recognition is not synonymous with approval," the Secretary observed. U. S. policy is not inconsistent with "our encouragement of democracy," he added.

MEAT SERVES EVERYBODY

Helps People
Of course you know meat helps you. You prove it every time you sit down to a dish of stew or a serving of steak, or bite into a hamburger.
The vigor and productivity of our America . . . our capacity for healthful enjoyment . . . are based on a diet built around meat.

Helps Soil
The farmer knows how meat helps the land. Livestock farming, with its wide use of range and pasturage land, is the kind of farming that "ties down" our precious topsoil and builds back fertility. It helps the land to raise more of everything we eat.

Helps Medicine
The doctor knows the importance of insulin and other vital medicines that come from the glands of meat animals.
Basic manufacturing materials like wool, leather and gelatin—and dozens of important chemicals—come from the by-products of meat.

Helps the Nation
The experts who calculate America's real wealth know that the only things that count are the ones that can be put to use by people. Meat animals convert grass from vast range lands of the West, and forage crops, into human food. They turn waste products like sugar beet pulp into nourishing meat.

When you go to the market for meat, you think of the meat supply awaiting you as just an everyday service. Nowhere but in America can you count on getting the meat you want, when you want it.
But isn't it a satisfaction to realize that in serving you, this great meat service also brings broad benefits to your country, its people and its land?

THE MEAT TEAM—from farm to plant to store
It takes the teamwork of farmers, meat packers and retailers—and the people who serve them in transportation, marketing and distribution—to make sure your meat will be where you want it when you want it. This "team" moves meat from farm to table at a lower service cost than almost any other food.

Jury Frees Judge In Shooting Case

Atlanta, Sept. 19 (AP).—A jury acquitted tonight Judge Robert Carpenter of attempted murder after a five-day trial.

The jury was out 59 minutes.

The judge's eyes promptly filled with tears and he put his arm around his lovely, 20-year-old stepdaughter, who also fought hard to keep from sobbing aloud.

As soon as the jury announced its verdict, the courtrom broke into cheers, despite an earlier warning by Trial Judge Virlyn B. Moore that he would tolerate no demonstration.

The handsome 44-year-old Civil Court judge was charged with shooting in the face John Lockwood, 53, his one-time best friend, later attorney for Mrs. Carpenter in a divorce suit.

He said on the witness stand he fired at the former Philadelphia lawyer to foil an attempt to steal his wife, money and good name.

Scores of well-wishers crowded around the tearful judge who could only smile shakenly. Asked for a statement, the judge was speechless.

His attorney, Ellis Barrett, however, said: "You can quote Judge Carpenter as saying that at the outset he knew right would prevail."

As soon as he could escape the crowd around him, the judge, his 82-year-old father and his stepdaughter, Barbara, departed arm-in-arm.

Barbara sided during the trial with her stepfather. She testified Lockwood wormed his way into her mother's confidence and affection to break up the Carpenter home.

Throughout its five days the trial was ridden with sensations. The last day was no exception.

In a final trip to the witness stand today Judge Carpenter testified he once knocked his mother-in-law down a flight of stairs because she came home "filthy, lousy drunk."

He so testified in denying charges by Mrs. Minnie Sullivan, 62, that he had made improper advances toward her.

Reports Advances

In her testimony, Mrs. Sullivan said Carpenter made advances to her several months ago in the Carpenter home, before the judge and her daughter separated.

She said she resisted and told him to get out of the room.

"From then on," she added, "he kept making advances and dirty remarks, and I told him if he didn't stop I'd shoot him with his own gun."

Carpenter went back to the witness stand and denied her testimony.

Once, he said, "I knocked her all the way down the steps as hard as I could because she came home filthy, lousy drunk."

He added that he sold his home so that his mother-in-law could not live with them any longer.

Woman, 21, Will Hang

London, Sept. 19 (U.P.).—Margaret Williams, 21, who once told her husband she could not love any man, was sentenced to be hanged today for the murder that ended her platonic marriage.

Mrs. Williams

Mrs. Williams, a private in the Women's Royal Army Corps, was found guilty of stabbing to death her soldier - husband, Monty, after a quarrel in the family hostel in which they lived at Klagenfurt, Austria.

She wept in the dock as she saw Justice John Streatfield place the fateful black silk cloth on his white judicial wig before pronouncing her death sentence. One of the women jurors burst into tears as well. The jury had recommended mercy.

In his summation Streatfield said Mrs. Williams was "far too fond of alcohol" and was under the influence of drink on the night of the stabbing.

Mrs. Lee Asks Full Divorce, Son's Custody

E. Brooke Lee, vice chairman of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission and Montgomery County Democratic leader, has been sued for absolute divorce by Mrs. Thelma Llewellyn Lee, it was learned yesterday.

Mrs. Lee, who now lives at Llewellyn Field, Norwood, Md., was awarded a limited decree on March 4, 1948. She charged desertion.

In the present suit in Montgomery Circuit Court, Mrs. Lee asks for the absolute divorce, ratification of a property settlement previously entered into and custody of the couple's minor son, Bruce.

In the property settlement, Mrs. Lee waived her alimony rights in return for an agreement by Lee to pay $3000 a year for the support of the child.

The Lees were married in New York City October 5, 1935, and lived together until August 6, 1947, the suit says.

Human Ashes Identified in Hearts Trial

Dover, Del., Sept. 19 (U.P.).—An anthropologist today identified the bones and ashes exhibited by the State in Delaware's lonely hearts murder trial as those of a human being.

The testimony was given at the trial of 16-year-old Robert Brennan and his mother, Mrs. Inez Brennan, by Dr. Thomas D. Stewart, curator of physical anthropology at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D. C. He was called by the State to support its contention that the ashes were the remains of Wade N. Wooldridge, 77, of Stone Mountain, Va., who allegedly was murdered on the Brennan farm last October 10.

Holding up a small fragment of bone, Dr. Stewart told the jury of 10 men and two women that it was part of the finger of an "adult human being." He then identified a few other fragments as "definite" parts of a human body and said that the ashes had "all the characteristics" of human ashes.

Previously, a State Police captain testified that investigators were led to the ashes, found in a pigpen on the Brennan farm, by Robert after the youth's arrest last April 15. Robert said they were part of the remains of Wooldridge, the captain said.

Robert, on trial on a murder charge, is accused of killing Wooldridge with a shotgun at the insistence of his mother, whom Wooldridge met through a lonely hearts club. Mrs. Brennan, a 45-year-old divorcee and mother of two other sons, is being tried as an accomplice.

300,000 Majority Seen for Lehman

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Paul E. Fitzpatrick, New York Democratic State chairman, said yesterday that [illegible] would not need President Truman's help to get elected to the United States Senate on November 8.

"Lehman will win by 300,000 votes," Fitzpatrick told reporters as he was leaving the White House "I may up that as time goes on."

Lehman's Republican opponent is the incumbent Senator John Foster Dulles, who was appointed by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey after the resignation of Senator Robert F. Wagner. The special election in November will decide who will serve out the remainder of Wagner's six-year term, which expires at the end of 1950.

President Truman, at a news conference on September 8, said he probably would make a speech in New York if it would be helpful.

With this in mind, White House reporters asked Fitzpatrick yesterday if Mr. Truman would be called on to help former Governor Lehman.

"I don't think we need any help," Fitzpatrick said. "We're perfectly all right in New York."

He went on to say, however, that if Mr. Truman wanted to come to New York, there was no question but that he would be helpful.

He then made his prediction of a 300,000 majority for Lehman together with the statement that he might "up" this figure later.

Asked about the controversy between Francis Cardinal Spellman and Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt over Federal aid to education, Fitzpatrick said he thought that had been straightened out.

He said, in response to another question, that he didn't think the controversy would cost Lehman any Catholic votes.

Owen D. Young, retired industrialist and educator, who in the past has been boomed for the Democratic nomination for President, announced earlier yesterday that he would support Dulles in the senatorial race because of his experience in foreign affairs.

Young said that he favored Dulles because his defeat "might well do irreparable injury" to the Nation's bipartisan foreign policy.

In a letter to Governor Dewey, Young said he had weighed the issues carefully. He added:

"If the contest involved only the selection of one or the other on broad, personal appraisals, I should probably be forced, as a traditional Democrat and without any disparagement of Mr. Dulles, to vote for Governor Lehman. In the selection of a Senator this year, however, there are very important qualifying backgrounds to be considered.

"The development of a wise foreign policy for the United States in a chaotic world is undoubtedly the most important problem which faces every citizen. I know of no one who, as a result of intimate contact with international conditions and as a result of experience abroad and with the United Nations and recently in the United States Senate, has a more comprehensive understanding or sound judgment as to the development of a wise American policy than John Foster Dulles."

Salesman Reports Theft of Brushes

H. E. Prager of New York, a salesman, told police yesterday his car was entered Sunday night and $600 worth of sample brushes stolen. The car was parked, he said, at 3d st. and Florida ave. ne. He said he also lost two suits of clothes.

Senate Confirms FTC Appointment

JOHN CARSON

Carson Confirmed for FTC Post, 45-25

The Senate yesterday confirmed 59-year-old John Carson, a political independent, for a seat on the Federal Trade Commission.

The vote was 45 to 25, with the Senate dividing almost down the party line.

Republicans contended Carson wasn't a Republican and, therefore, not entitled to one of the minority seats on the five-man commission.

They further challenged his economic views and called him a "fuzzy thinker."

Democrats called him "an able man . . . a consumers' man" and said no witness had challenged his competence.

If he wasn't a Republican, neither was he a Democrat, they maintained, and the President complied with the law. (The law merely limits the President to three members of the same political party. The commission already had its full complement of three Democrats.)

Four Republicans voted with 41 Democrats for confirmation. They were Senators Langer (N. Dak.), Thye (Minn.), Watkins (Utah) and Young (N. D.).

Only two Democrats, Byrd (Va.) and McClellan (Ark.) joined the 23 Republicans voting "No."

Carson, former Washington and Indianapolis newspaperman, was once secretary of former Senator James Couzens (R., Mich.), and later served in several Government posts. Before confirmation he was research and information director of the Cooperative League of the USA.

Leading the fight for confirmation, Senator Warren G. Magnuson (D., Wash.) predicted Carson would become a "Consumers' Watchdog" on the commission. He said his varied experience particularly fitted him for the job and disputed Republican charges that he was opposed to the private enterprise system.

Senator John W. Bricker (R., Ohio) led the Republican attack. Bricker said Carson was "at best a dreamer" who "does not have any conception of the business system . . . does not agree with our system."

"He is not a Republican, never has been a Republican and does not anticipate becoming one," said Bricker.

Senate Interstate Commerce Chairman Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) said he had all of Carson's writings explored and still voted for him because "I like him." Johnson said Carson didn't need to be a Republican to fill the post, that those who wanted a literally bipartisan commission should move to amend the law.

Senator Clyde M. Reed (R., Kans.) said that no appointment since he had been in the Senate had been "so inappropriate and inadequate."

Senator Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.) said Carson was being opposed because he is connected with cooperatives and warned Republicans they would have to reckon with the farmers if they "line up with the anti-cooperative movement."

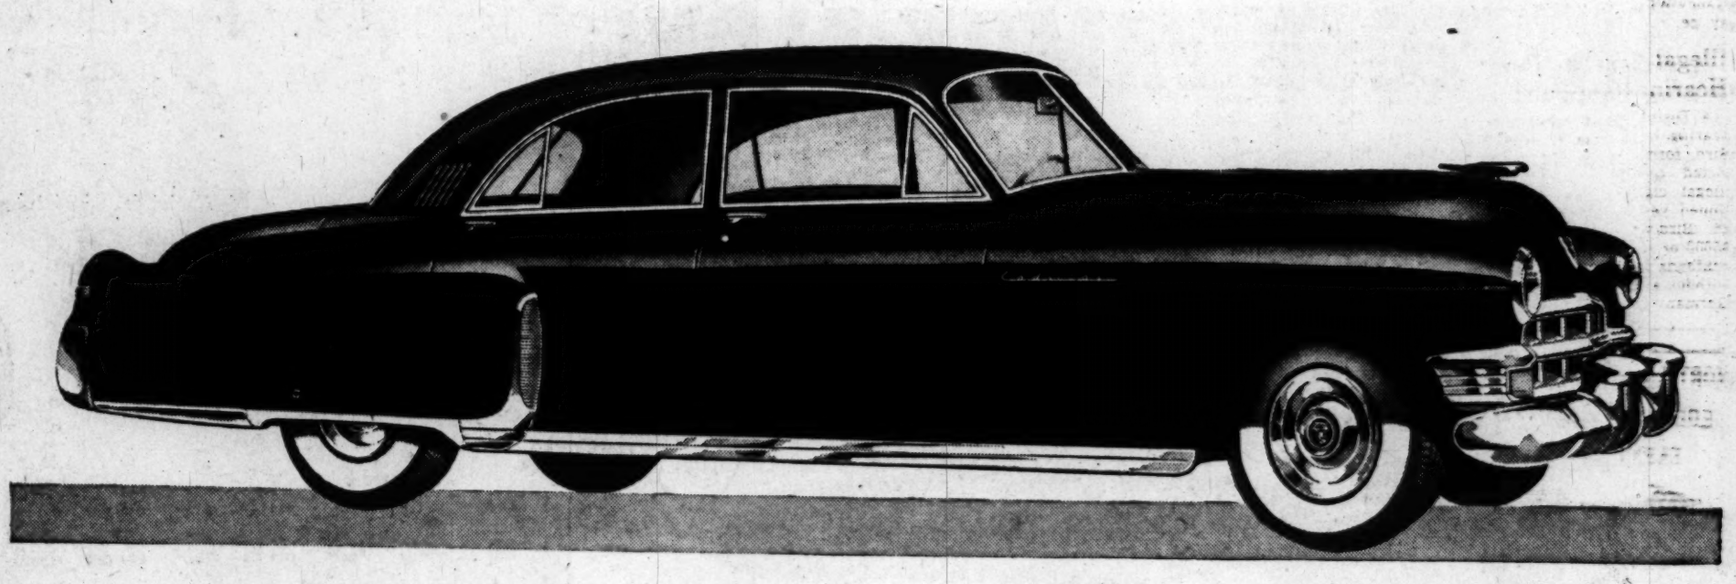
Where Sixty Minutes
Seem but Half an Hour!



DISTANCE isn't the only thing which passes swiftly when you sit at the wheel of a 1949 Cadillac. So does time!

You rest your hand on the beautiful steering wheel and press your toe—ever so lightly—against the obedient throttle . . . and you're off on a wonderful journey.

Your ride is free and easy and restful. You just sit—and relax—and enjoy the scenery—and the companionship of those about you. Conversation is as easy as if you were sitting in your own drawing room—for the car is so quiet you can hear the soft ticking of the electric clock.

The labor of driving is almost non-existent. The big powerful motor moves you in and out of traffic as if by automatic propulsion. Steering is little more than a response to your wish. Brakes are light to the touch and velvety-smooth in action.

You are as relaxed and care-free as the happy passengers around you. For you do little more than the thinking—and the car does the rest.

And then a familiar landmark looms in the distance. Can it be that you are there?

You look at the clock and you look at the speedometer—and, surely enough, the time and the distance have passed, and your journey is over.

Better come in and see for yourself that—when you sit at the wheel of a Cadillac—sixty minutes seem but half an hour!

Government Urges High Egg Supports

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Agriculture Department doesn't want to stop this year's high level price supports for eggs.

A spokesman, Ralph S. Trigg, administrator of the Production and Marketing Administration, says that wouldn't be fair to the egg farmers.

Also, he told a Senate Agriculture Subcommittee, it would tend to destroy the farmers' faith in their Government. The department, he said, had made a "definite commitment" that it would maintain the high price support level until next June.

Trigg appeared in place of Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan, who was in San Francisco, explaining the Brannan farm plan to a Democratic Pacific Coast rally.

Trigg told of the high cost of the Government program to keep egg prices high. Since 1936 it has cost 100 million dollars, he said. He is counting on this year's program not costing more than 45 million. It won't, he says, if he can salvage 40 million out of the 85 million the Government has invested in eggs so far this year.

Trigg turned down a suggestion by Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) that the Government ship eggs it buys at around 35 cents a dozen in the Midwest to the East, where housewives pay 90 cents a dozen.

First, he said, Eastern housewives don't want the smaller eggs they produce in the Midwest. Secondly, he said, the surplus problem can't be solved "by changing the locatio of the surplus."

If it was practical, he said, to ship those Midwest eggs to other markets, private business would have done it long ago.

Trigg appeared as witness in a hearing on Thomas' proposal that price supports on both eggs and potatoes be dropped for the rest of this year.

Trigg said the department has already asked for "a better and less wasteful plan" to lessen the price support costs. Listeners believed he referred to the Brannan farm plan. That would let prices drop so that consumers would get lower food. The Government would make up the difference to farmers by subsidies.

Auto Plunge Death Ruled Accidental

District traffic deaths 1949 .. 44
Deaths this date last year .. 49
Total traffic deaths 1948 67

The death of Mrs. Effie Mae Hill, 27, of 914 3d st. nw., from injuries suffered when she plunged from a moving auto Sunday, was ruled an accidental traffic death by a coroner's jury yesterday.

Testimony by Mrs. Hill's husband, John 27, brought out that Mrs. Hill became involved with him in an argument over a 50-cent loan while he was driving her to work at the High Ice Cream Store, 505 C st. ne.

When her husband turned the vehicle around to pick up a bankbook at home, Mrs. Hill jumped from the car, fracturing her skull. She died later in Casualty Hospital.

Mrs. Phillips Death Accidental

A certificate of accidental death was also issued by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald in the case of Mrs. Ruth Phillips, 37-year-old mother of three children, who was killed early Sunday morning when the car she was driving smashed into a tree in the 3900 block of Cathedral av. nw.

Mrs. Phillips, who lived at 3100 Connecticut av. nw., was a secretary on the staff of the House Agricultural Committee.

Her husband, Vearl F. Phillips, 37, and another passenger were also injured in the crash.

In accidents yesterday, 3-year-old Carolyn A. Atkins, of 4609 3rd pl. se., was critically injured when she was struck by the heavy rear dual wheel of an ice truck as she fell from the right front fender near her home.

The little girl was one of a group of children playing about the parked truck at 12:30 p.m. According to police, the driver, George W. Vermillion, 34, of 1615 A st. ne., approached and warned the youngsters away before he entered the vehicle on the left side.

Unnoticed by Vermillion, Carolyn sat down on the right front fender. As the truck began lumbering off, the child fell or jumped from her perch and was hit by the wheel, police said.

At Gallinger Hospital, was found to be suffering from internal injuries, back injuries and multiple cuts and bruises. Her condition was reported critical. No charges were placed against the driver.

A five-year-old girl Rose Marie Owen, of 906 Savannah st. se., suffered a compound fracture of her right leg yesterday when she ran from behind a parked auto into the path of another car on Alabama ave. near 5th st. se. She was taken to Gallinger Hospital where her condition was reported good. No charges were placed against the driver of the car, Mrs. Nancy Wilson, 23, of 2508 Southern av. se.

A District Court habeas corpus hearing in the case of Russell G. Bird, former Army employe, convicted recently in Germany of illegal cigarette deals, was continued yesterday until September 26. Bird who was sentenced to pay $5000 or to serve five years in jail contends that he was arrested here without a warrant and shipped to Germany for trial.

Lee Highway Light System Works Well

A new system of traffic lights, allowing reversal of center-lane traffic during rush hours, made its debut yesterday along a 1.5-mile stretch of Lee Highway.

The new system, reserving two of the three lanes for rush-hour traffic, worked "very well" according to Arlington Police Chief H. L. Woodyard and County Highway Engineer Clifton Stoneburner.

In fact, the progressively arranged lights sent traffic onto Key Bridge so rapidly, according to Woodyard, that there was some congestion at the Washington end of the bridge during the morning peak. He said the new Whitehurst Freeway, scheduled for completion October 8, should remedy such tie-ups.

Under the new system, center-lane traffic along the three-lane highway is one-way into Washington from N. Highland st. in North Arlington to Key Bridge from 7 to 9:30 a. m. The process is reversed at night with two lanes for Virginia-bound traffic from 4 to 6 p. m.

Between peak periods, a flashing yellow caution light allows motorists going in both directions to use the center lane.

The only problem encountered yesterday was that of motorists moving against the rush-hour traffic in attempting a left turn. They must hold up drivers in the single lane behind them until a pause in the dual-lane traffic occurs.

WHERE TWO DIED—Aerial view shows cars and Diesel locomotive of Southern Railway passenger train wreck near Newton, N. C., yesterday

2 From Area Hurt in Train Derailing Which Kills Pair

Newton, N. C., Sept. 19 (U.P.)—The locomotive and six cars of a Southern Railway passenger train left the rails on a sharp curve early today, killing two dining-car cooks and sending 34 persons to hospitals.

Three trainmen among the injured were near death, attendants at Newton Hospital said.

Listed among passengers taken to the hospital were George Warner, 29, of Alexandria, Va., with shoulder, thigh and head injuries, and Bertha Brown of Washington, D. C., with bruises.

The casualty toll might have been higher if four Pullman cars on the rear of the train had not snapped loose and rolled on down the tracks, their passengers merely shaken up.

Coaches Follow Down Bank

The three coaches followed the dining, baggage and mail cars and the Diesel locomotive down a 12-foot bank into a ditch. They plowed into the ground on their sides.

The accident occurred a few hundred yards from the Newton Station at 5:10 a. m. (EST). The train was bound from Salisbury, N. C., where it was made up, to Asheville, N. C., with pullman cars from Washington, D. C., New York and points North.

The bodies of the two cooks trapped in the dining-car kitchen were recovered in midafternoon after a wrecking crane lifted another car off the diner.

A fellow dining car worker identified the cooks as Robert Freeman, about 50, of Salisbury, N. C., and Hersten E. Longmier, about 60, of Knoxville, Tenn.

Engineer Trapped 45 Minutes

The three other crewmen not expected to live were listed as Firman Herman Bishop of West Asheville; Tillis Randleman of Hickory, N. C., and A. T. Teatley, 45, of Asheville. The latter two underwent leg amputations.

Engineer George Cruse of Asheville was trapped 45 minutes in his cab but was not critically hurt.

A baby, thrown from one of the overturned cars into a nearby field, escaped with only a few scratches. A bystander found her asleep in the field.

The tracks were not damaged. Most of the unhurt passengers went on to Asheville by bus.

Man Hurt in Train Wreck on Vacation

Residents of 409 S. Lee st., Alexandria last night said that a George T. Warner, who lives at that address, was en route to North Carolina on a vacation trip with his wife, Jane, and their infant daughter.

Neighbors said Warner works for an insurance company in Washington.

Man Gets 'Fix' on Ticket Received While Giving Blood

A man whose car was tagged for parking between 4 to 6 p. m., while he donated blood to the Red Cross had the ticket adjusted by Capt. Albert Bullock last week.

During last week, records showed yesterday, 106 traffic tickets were adjusted, 86 by warnings, and 20 by cancellations, according to the police list.

The blood donor was James S. O'Rourke, 23, of 1401 N. Kenilworth ave., Arlington. He had parked on 12th st. nw., near S st.

A total of 13 persons had tickets canceled because of diplomatic immunity, according to the list. They were:

Louis J. Audigou, France, overtime parking; Manuel A. Carmona, Peru, parked in alley; Rubin J. Gordon, Chile, two tickets, parking in alley; M. P. Low, Great Britain, parked away from curb; Antonio Vega, Chile, parked in alley; Elizabeth A. Warrell, Austria, expired meter.

Also, James D. Miller, India, no parking zone; Rene LeCarn, France, failure to lock ignition; William C. Pastor, Great Britain, no parking zone; Jandaro S. Sanchez, Brazil, no parking zone; John H. Dieter, jr., Belgium, overtime parking; F. W. Ashe, Great Britain, parking in loading zone, and Semih A. Ustem, Turkey, failure to stop for a sign.

Aiding Independence

As the General Assembly opens at Lake Success, Ambassador Philip C. Jessup has done well to make clear the American position on critical world issues before the United Nations. Too often in the past that position has seemed to vacillate or to be shrouded in confusion. This time it is enunciated plainly. It is a policy of helping Colonial peoples obtain independence and of helping independent nations remain that way.

Dr. Jessup wisely concentrated his attention on Asia and Africa. He came to grips with the rising nationalism in these areas, noting that the United States believes that peoples desiring freedom should be given it "quickly and generously." At the same time he warned against the false panaceas of groups such as the Communists who seek to exploit independence movements for dictatorial power. "We should offer to the peoples of Asia and Africa," he said, "the tangible means of helping themselves to achieve a better life," rather than inflame them to violence with mere political slogans. This needed saying, and it is a realistic basis on which to approach the projected technical aid program of the U. N. Economic and Social Council and private assistance by American investors under Point 4.

Dr. Jessup cited his hope that the Indonesian issue will be resolved without further reference to the U. N., and by implication he encouraged the same approach in Indo-China. He placed the United States in favor of independence for Libya, for the award of most of Eritrea to Ethiopia, and for Italian trusteeship over Somaliland. He called for continuation of the U. N. watchdog committees on Greece and Korea within the realm of protecting free people from external attack. Further moves in Palestine must await the reports of the Conciliation Commission, but meanwhile the United States favors U. N. support for Arab refugees. The United States will not push the restrictive British covenant on freedom of information, although this by no means signifies abandonment of the American convention on gathering and transmission of news hammered out so laboriously.

This limited declaration of policy does not, of course, bespeak the American stand on other issues outside the immediate province of the U. N.—for example, a new China policy, on which Dr. Jessup also is working, remains to be stated. But as far as it goes the declaration is constructive. By calling for American assistance to national aspirations, although not blind assistance, he holds to the liberal tradition of aiding evolution rather than reaction.

The Budapest Trials

At this date, we fancy, not even the most infatuated fellow travelers take confessions at Communist propaganda trials for Gospel. Moreover, Americans generally have now some notion of the physical and psychological methods used in obtaining such confessions. Yet it seems to us that a slight measure of truth can be sifted out of the fantastic, self-incriminating testimony of Comrade Laszlo Rajk and Gen. Gyorgy Palffy at Budapest.

The principal instigators of this plot to which they have confessed were of course Marshal Tito and his sinister henchman, Comrade Rankovic, Yugoslavian Minister of the Interior and head of the dread OZNA, or secret police, which on its home-grounds at least has been more than a match for Comrade Stalin's MVD. Also said to be among the conspirators were the former American Minister to Budapest, Mr. Chapin; an attache of the French Legation, M. Francois Gachot, and various French, British and American secret agents. The conspiracy, it appears, was frustrated by the arrest of Cardinal Mindszenty, who confessed everything, and thereby permitted the faithful Stalinists to seize the unsuspected traitors within their midst.

Comrade Rajk, who had been serving as Foreign Minister was arrested last June. Among those who followed him into the jails of the political police were General Palffy, who had been virtually in command of the Hungarian army; his aide, Maj. Bela Korodny; Comrades Tibor Szonyi and Andras Szalai, important party officials; Pal Justus, a social Fascist (i. e., former member of the Social Democratic Party), and Lazar Brankov, former Counselor of the Yugoslav Legation, and evidently the intermediary between Marshal Tito and the native plotters. It was at about the time of these arrests, you may remember, that the famous Hungarian Communist leader, Comrade Bela Kun, went to Moscow for what were said to be reasons of health. He died soon afterward and was given an impressive state funeral.

Comrade Rajk, when he testified last week, glibly admitted that he has been a traitor almost from the beginning. He had used his position in the party, he said, to serve as a spy successively for (a) the Horthy government, (b) Generalissimo Franco, (c) the French Deuxieme Bureau, (d) the Gestapo, and of course (e) the American imperialists. General Palffy, too, admitted that he had always been a Fascist, and like Comrade Rajk, an incorrigible enemy of the Soviet Union and the working class. As for Tito he, too, had always worked in cahoots with the Western imperialists, and had even agreed to Winston Churchill's plan for an invasion of the Balkans. Nothing, then, could be more natural for three such congenital traitors than to agree on a plan to assassinate the Stalinist members of the Hungarian government and to overthrow the people's democracy by military force as the first step in the organization of an anti-Soviet Balkan bloc.

Now how much plausibility is there in all this? Well, first of all, the fact is that, after his breach with the Cominform, it would be to Tito's interest, as a matter of mere safety, to entice the Hungarian Communists over to his side, if such a thing were possible. There is also the fact that the insistence of Moscow that the full program of collectivization be applied without delay in a country already full of sullen hatred against the regime has created difficulties with which even a ruthless Communist government found itself unable to cope. And finally there is the fact that the Communist parties of almost all countries (except perhaps the United States) contain elements that have grown increasingly restive under the arrogant and autocratic methods whereby the men in the Kremlin issue their ukases concerning matters of which they have no real knowledge. In these circumstances it would not be at all surprising if such elements, emboldened by Tito's successful defiance of Moscow, had entered into some kind of tacit understanding with him.

MAP In The Senate

As debate began yesterday on the Military Aid Program, Senator Connally claimed a substantial majority of votes for the Administration's bill. That has long been taken for granted. Neither the Senate nor the House will take responsibilty for blocking aid measures which the experts as well as the man in the street believe to be essential to our national security. For this very reason the question ought not to be whether the votes are at hand to pass the bill but whether the program that it will put into effect is sound in detail as well as in general principle. The fact that public opinion dictates the enactment of an arms aid bill makes it the more imperative for the Senate to insist that the bill be right.

The worst feature of the bill is the compromise under which 75 million dollars has been earmarked for China. Compared to the $1,314,000,000 which the Administration seeks for arms aid, the item for China is small. But it takes character and principle away from the entire bill. In the conversations here last week, Foreign Secretary Bevin of Great Britain and Foreign Minister Schuman of France found themselves in agreement with Secretary of State Acheson in the conviction that no aid that can be given from any outside source will arrest the Chinese revolution. Aid to the remaining anti-Communist factions in China would be regarded as a futile effort to prevent the Chinese from working out their own destiny—the antithesis of the principle of aiding free people to remain free. The bill before the Senate is designed to supply arms to nations for individual and collective self-defense in support of the principles and purposes of the United Nations. There is no room in it for foolish ventures that contravene U. N. principles and detract from our security.

It is fortunate that the debate is taking place after the initial steps toward setting up the Atlantic defense system have taken shape. The Senate should now have no difficulty in resisting the tempting proposal of Senator Sparkman and 10 other Senators to earmark 10 to 25 per cent of the MAP fund for an "Atlantic police force." We hope that such a force will come into being and that MAP funds will be used to hasten it. But it is not for Congress to dictate the form of the new supernational military organization. It must evolve out of the Defense Committee that was set up on Saturday by the North Atlantic Council. Undoubtedly the Administration can use MAP funds to good effect in compelling a unity of command in the new defense system and a specialization of functions among the participating powers. The aim should be thorough internationalization of the defenses of the Atlantic community. It is well to remember, however, that this aim cannot be achieved merely by setting up an Atlantic police force composed of volunteers from many nations and owing allegiance to no one country.

Along with an international police force we must have civil authorities capable of directing it. That can be achieved only when the nations are ready to surrender their sovereign power to make war to an international body. There is hope that the North Atlantic Council or the Security Council of the United Nations stripped of the veto handicap may become such a body. But these objectives are yet to be attained. While working toward that end, Congress can make its contribution most effective by requiring that MAP funds be used for unification of defense in the Atlantic community, without trying to specify the details of the defense mechanism to be created.

Wages And Devaluation

Since Britain's Labor government is dependent on the political support of the trade unions and an election is in the offing, it took real courage for Sir Stafford Cripps to tell the people that an increase in living costs resulting from devaluation "gives no reason for any increase in personal incomes, whether from wages, salaries, profits, or any other source." However, official efforts to hold the wage line firm will be unavailing, unless the great body of organized labor is prepared to forgo strikes, slowdowns and other coercive weapons to obtain higher wages. Judging from recent reports, the outlook for labor cooperation with the government is far from encouraging. Agitation for wage increases has been growing steadily of late and will doubtless be intensified by the devaluation-induced rise in prices of food and other commodities.

To be sure, the British Trade Union Congress, representing eight million workers, voted recently to use "the greatest possible measure of restraint in seeking to increase personal incomes." But it was pointed out at the time that many unions whose representatives indorsed the resolution actually had wage claims pending. The executive secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, for instance, was reportedly shocked when he heard that his own union's demand for a wage increase had been turned down by an arbitration board.

Critics who charged that the action of the TUC was hypocritical are in some measure being confirmed in their skepticism by subsequent developments on the wage front. The shipbuilding and engineering unions have demanded $4 more per week for their multimillion membership. Some local railways, angered at the denial of their request for wage increases, have voted in favor of slowdowns—another name for soldiering on the job. About 900 dockworkers have decided to ban overtime work. Moreover, the TUC left the door open for the kind of wage increases that American trade unionists classify as adjustments to correct inequalities. That covers a lot of ground.

Evidently the success of the campaign to increase British sales in dollar markets by devaluing the pound will depend to a very large extent upon the attitude of organized labor. It can make a tremendous contribution to that end by supporting the government's wage stabilization policy. On the other hand, if the unions resort to strikes, slowdowns and other coercive weapons to obtain wage increases, the stimulative effect of devaluation on dollar export trade will be greatly weakened, if not entirely nullified. If that happens, the workers will eventually pay dearly for their shortsightedness. For living standards are bound to deteriorate, when outside aid ceases, unless sales of British goods and services provide the means of paying for essential imports of food and raw materials.

A nation, like an individual, cannot live beyond its income year in and year out. Its people cannot consume more goods than they are able to produce for direct use, plus what they can acquire by exchanging their own goods and services for the goods and services of other countries. No matter what the level of money wages may be, the real wages of workers—that is, wages in terms of goods—will be reduced if the volume of goods available for domestic use declines. This is a hard fact that the British unions cannot afford to forget.

Women Alcoholics

Present-day women, who recently have been blamed and scolded for virtually all the social ills of American life, may be able to hold up their heads again as the result of a study of chronic alcoholism made by Dr. E. M. Jellinek of Yale University. This shows that the rate of alcoholism among women in 1945 was lower than in the "good old days" of 1910. In that year about 1 out of every 260 adult American women was a chronic alcoholic. In 1945 the rate was roughly 1 out of every 413. The study also shows that the only increase in alcoholism among women between 1931 and 1945 was during the war years, when it rose 12½ per cent. For men the increase in that time was 46.3 per cent. Neither men nor women can be too complacent.

The widespread idea that women today are more inebriate than their mothers or grandmothers may be traced to the fact that their drinking is more public. In the past female alcoholics were hidden away by their families. Now they are treated, allowed to join the Alcoholics Anonymous, even in some places jailed. Dr. Jellinek's study has a further good word for the present. People today are drinking about the same per capita as in 1850, but now it's high beer consumption while then it was whisky. Incidentally, he found a third more alcoholism in the large cities than in the small ones and twice as much in the big cities as on the farms.

Loyalty Information

The Loyalty Review Board, top "loyalty" authority in the Government, issued a memorandum (No. 45) on July 26 to all Government agencies, authorizing publication of "loyalty" findings, which seems to have escaped general notice in spite of its significance. It disposes, in fact, of recent court findings to the effect that the Government may do as it pleases about firing employes under "loyalty" charges without due process, since "no one has a constitutional right to Government employment."

It has already been pointed out that such firings may injure a "charged" person in other respects than his Government employability. Now the Review Board instructs agencies that to non-Government inquirers "having a legitimate and bona-fide interest, such as inquiries of references in the case of employment," the information may be given that "a favorable loyalty determination has been made with respect to" Mr. CAF Eleven, or that Mr. Eleven has been fired on "loyalty" grounds, or that his "loyalty" is being checked but "has not yet been determined," or that he quit before his "loyalty" check had been completed.

These last three bits of information amount to blacklisting. It is not consonant with Anglo-Saxon principles of justice that people be blacklisted for all employment on findings made by administrative boards many of which are politically timid and many more unsophisticated in the matters they deal with, acting in all cases after proceedings that lack every safeguard of due process from clear charges through confrontation of adverse witnesses.

The board's memorandum also seems to conflict with a presidential directive of March 13, 1948 (13 FR 1359) that says in part:

". . . all reports, records, and files relative to the loyalty of employes or prospective employes . . . shall be maintained in confidence, and shall not be transmitted or disclosed except as required in the efficient conduct of business.

"Any subpena or demand or request for information . . . of the nature described, received from sources other than those persons in the executive branch . . . who are entitled thereto by reason of their official duties, shall be respectfully declined, on the basis of this directive, and the request . . . shall be referred to the Office of the President . . . There shall be no relaxation of the provisions of this directive except with my express authority."

I believe that there are grounds for holding that the board has overstepped its authority; I am sure that it has overstepped the bounds of justice and decency.

'Red Dean'

As a layman in the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States, the writer feels impelled to condemn openly the undemocratic utterances and seemingly irresponsible actions of Dr. Hewlett Johnson (the so-called "Red Dean") of Canterbury, England.

God-fearing people the world over were shocked, when this "man of the church" came to this country, and hobnobbed with everyone of doubtful democratic devotion—from the "pinks" to the outright subversives—in the name of "culture and world peace." His atrocious antics now have reached an anticlimax, with his "personal appearance" in Moscow—home of dictatorship and headquarters for the perfidious forces of materialism.

It would not be such a travesty on real peace and brotherly love, if this deluded dean would but remove his vestments and appear as a "proletarian individual," when he sees fit to exercise his "freedom of speech, opinion, association, etc." The least he could do, before posing for the news photographers with the pseudo-religious Soviet stooge (the Metropolitan of the Communist-front "church"), would be to divest himself of the cross of the Christ he is betraying.

British "Aliens"

Eire and Britain are now completely independent, but both have agreed that the citizens of the other shall not be regarded as "aliens."

Is it not time that the United States of America and the British Commonwealth followed that excellent example?

Britain made a small beginning when citizens of the United States were accorded British visas free of charge; but the United States still has a long way to go. For example, a British student, granted a postgraduate scholarship at an American university through the generosity of an American foundation, is treated as an emigrant, and has not merely to queue for hours at the American consulate, but also to go through endless formalities, fingerprinting, etc., and to pay a fee of $10; to incur the expense of blood tests at a pathological laboratory, of providing two copies of his full birth certificate (the inexpensive variety won't do), three photographs, and a vaccination certificate.

Under present conditions it is not only desirable, but vital, that the Anglo-Saxon world should draw closer together. Is there any more effective way of doing so than by agreeing that our respective citizens shall not in future be regarded as aliens?

Cab Complaints

In the City of Washington there are approximately 9000 cab drivers who earn their living by conveying peoples of all dispositions, hither, thither and yon.

Perhaps it is safe to say that the majority of these cab drivers live in constant fear of losing their means of livelihood as a result of being "reported" by some crank, drunk, "stuffed shirt," egomaniac, t r o u b l e-seeker or just plain moron who is offended because the cab driver doesn't answer "sir" to his every question, or who feels that the cab driver is rude and insulting when he insists upon payment to him of the authorized fare-price instead of meekly submitting to the passenger's demand for a "discount."

When a cab driver is "reported" he subsequently gets a "hearing" before the Board of Revocation and Review of the Traffic Bureau. If the "story" of the cabby's passenger is believed (which it, oh so often, is) then the cabby has to surrender his cab driver's identification card to the hack inspector's office for periods ranging from a week to six months or more, and there are numerous cases where cab drivers have been ordered to surrender their "cards" for an "indefinite period."

What is needed at the Traffic Bureau is a one-judge "court" with a capable judge presiding, and two capable lawyers (one for the prosecution and one for the defense) both on the District of Columbia payroll. The judge should decide whether the case against the cab driver should be "dismissed" or for what period (not less than 1 month or more than 18 months) the cab driver's "card" must be suspended.

Most of the "offenses" for which a cab driver is "reported" are but minor misdemeanors, and, whatever the misdemeanor may be, there can never be justification for withholding a cab driver's identification card for "an indefinite period" because such action means that he is to be deprived of means of earning his livelihood for "an indefinite period."

"Cost Of Kashmir"

There were inaccuracies in your September 17 editorial, "Cost of Kashmir." You said that Kashmir's subjects and invading Moslems from the northwest frontier resisted the decision of the Maharaja of Kashmir to accede to India, and India sent troops to back the Maharaja.

Early in October, 1947, Pathan tribesmen from beyond the Northwest Frontier Province, which on August 15 had become a part of Pakistan, invaded the state of Jammu and Kashmir.

By the third week of October these tribesmen, who were joined by Pakistan troops and led by Pakistan officers, were on the road from Domel to Baramula. Kashmir state troops gave battle to the invaders, but were overwhelmed by sheer numbers and surprising weight of arms.

When the Kashmir Valley was threatened, the ruler of Kashmir sought India's help to repel the raiders and save Kashmir from pillage and destruction.

Along with the request for help the maharaja sought accession of his state with India. Military help could not be given without such accession. Indian airborne troops arrived in Srinagar on the morning of October 27, just in time to save the capital city of Srinagar from destruction and death—a fate which had befallen the town of Baramula only two days before.

When India accepted the temporary accession of the state, the government of India announced that as soon as normal conditions were restored a plebiscite would be held to determine the wishes of the people as to the future of the state. It was thus India who first offered the democratic way of a plebiscite. India always has stood and will continue to stand by that offer.

You may recall that it was not only the ruler of the state who sought accession with India. A people's government of the state also simultaneously voted for accession. This government is headed by Sheikh Abdullah, a Moslem, who had for 19 years been the acknowledged leader and champion of the people and had spent a number of years in jail fighting for their rights.

India's stand is clear to discerning observers. As soon as Pakistan, who caused the dispute, withdraws her forces and disarms and disbands the irregulars, who are a part of her forces in Kashmir, a plebiscite will be conducted.

Of Pakistan's complicity in the large-scale raids on Kashmir, none has any doubt. It was because of continued Pakistan help for the raiders—help with arms and other war material, transport and gasoline and use of territory for military operations—that India made the complaint against Pakistan before the Security Council.

Science Foundation

WHILE THE politicians debate the issues of the past, the scientists are going right ahead creating the world of day after tomorrow. There could hardly be a better illustration of this than the controversy over the proposed National Science Foundation.

Some time ago, a group of scientists working on a project sponsored by Johns Hopkins University produced a supersonic guided missile. At the proving grounds, they gathered with great anticipation to send this new accurately guided instrument through the air faster than the speed of sound.

As it reached this fantastic speed, the operator at the controls sent out an impulse to turn the rudders in such a way that the missile would roll to the left. But, to the chagrin of the scientists following the test, the missile veered in just the opposite direction.

What they had not known was that across the supersonic barrier, directional impulses have an effect opposite to that on the accustomed side of that barrier. Consequently, much of this costly experiment had to be done over again.

Those who are urging establishment of the science foundation—and this includes most of the Nation's leading scientists—say that such expensive miscalculations could be avoided. Backed by 15 million dollars a year of Government money, the foundation would concentrate on pure science, which is the base of all experimentation. In this group approach, they would get at fundamentals that now hold up experimental work or necessitate involved and lengthy testing.

WHILE the bill creating a science foundation has been passed by the Senate, it has long been bottled up in the House Rules Committee. A group of Republicans and Southern Democrats on the committee believe that this is an easy place to save some money.

President Truman invited one of the group, Representative James W. Wadsworth, Republican, of New York, down to the White House to try to convince him that the foundation would actually save money. The President made the argument given to him by his top military advisers—the fact that the vast program of applied research financed especially by the Department of Defense is becoming more expensive and relatively less productive as it exhausts the available fundamental knowledge of natural phenomena.

Thus far there has been no indication that the opponents have changed their stand. As a result, the likelihood is that when the House returns to work a motion will be made, under the rule adopted in January, to discharge the Rules Committee and thereby get the bill up for a vote. Part of the opposition may be explained by the work of a lobby that has assiduously sought to defeat the science foundation bill. The lobby is the National Patent Council and Productive Inventions, Inc., and its proprietor is John W. Anderson.

AN EFFECTIVE lobbyist for the Patent Council is former Congressman Fritz Lanham of Texas. Lanham got into the record of the hearings an extraordinary attack on the backers of the foundation taken from the Chicago Tribune.

It is a beautiful example of the attack by smear association. The article pointed out that among the numerous advocates of the foundation is Dr. Harlow Shapley of Harvard University. Dr. Shapley was identified with organizations listed by the Attorney General as subversive.

If Dr. Shapley is for the bill, it must be communistic and, therefore, all who support it are also Communists or f e l l o w travelers. By this interesting process of logic, a great many members of Congress would become subversive, as would also the National Association of Manufacturers, which has supported the science bill.

The benefits of the pure research carried out by the proposed foundation would not, of course, be confined to the military. They would be of great value to industry, which is the reason for NAM backing, and to medicine.

Congress is appropriating 14 billion dollars for the Department of Defense. A substantial share of it will go to create the missiles and the supersonic planes that are part of the eerie scene being set for tomorrow's world. How much of this amount could be saved by concentrated research in pure science no one can say with accuracy. But, it would not be small.

Greek Children

Behind the "Tourist Curtain" in Greece, children are suffering to an almost unbelievable degree. The Save the Children Federation, 1 Madison ave., New York City, has just received a cable from its European commissioner, Dr. Charles R. Joy, which says:

"Here in Grammos Mountain region where 300 villages were evacuated in civil war, repatriation of 126,000 people is now beginning. These people have lost everything. They are almost naked. Twenty-five per cent of children have active tuberculosis. All are undernourished. Desperate need of clothing. Refugees have literally nothing. Please help."

We hope that some of your readers may be moved to contribute funds to cover the cost of processing and shipping clothing already on hand in our workrooms to these children who are in emergency need of help.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Continuing Crisis

THE CRUCIAL issue, which Sir Stafford Cripps hinted at but treated gently, is how to reap the benefits of devaluation without suffering all the pains. The benefit of devaluation is to become solvent. But devaluation in itself will not balance the accounts unless the painful fact is accepted or imposed that real wages must fall.

Lippmann

That was why Sir Stafford Cripps struggled so long to stave off the inevitable devaluation: why he used the whole power of the British government and of its imperial connections to make the pound sterling worth more in goods than it is actually worth.

He knew that in a modern democratic state, which is committed to a policy of full employment, where labor is fully organized and free to strike, the attainment of international solvency by devaluation is an extremely difficult and doubtful undertaking. For, without extraordinary measures of help from the creditor countries, particularly the United States, real wages in Britain must fall if the devaluation is to provide more than temporary relief: — while the shorts cover up and the immediate bargains are bought up, and before prices, wages and production costs in Britain catch up with the devaluation.

SIR STAFFORD CRIPPS used as "a simple example" an English motor car exported to the United States on which the price is 300 pounds sterling. At the old rate of exchange that car cost $1200 in the United States. At the new rate it would cost $840. Presumably more cars can be sold at the lower price than at the higher.

So far so good. But what needs to be noted is that in order to earn as many dollars as before the devaluation more cars have to be produced and sold—nearly 50 per cent more. Where the sale of one car earned $1200, it is now necessary to make and sell one and one half cars to earn the same $1200. That means that the real wages of British producers have fallen. And yet in their dollar earnings they are still where they were before. They work harder. They get no more pay. And they earn in dollars only what they earned before.

But the essence of their problem is that the same dollar earnings are not enough. They have to earn not the same number of dollars but more dollars than they earned before. So they must make and sell more than one and one half cars for the one they were selling, and still they must not expect more pay for the increased work.

But if they demand more pay for the extra work, the price of the car cannot be kept at 300 pounds sterling. If they are able to insist on earning as much as they did before the devaluation, the price of the car will rise to about 430 pounds sterling. They will then be back where they started. They will sell only as many cars as they can sell for $1200. The effect of the devaluation in promoting dollar earning exports will have been canceled out.

THE CRITICAL question, therefore, is how much of a reduction in their real wages British labor will accept, and what can be done to cushion the impact of their losses. In the nineteenth century before governments were committed to full employment, while labor was not strongly organized, the reduction of real wages would not be something that had to be accepted consciously. It was not something against which governments felt impelled to take measures of compensation. The reduction in real wages would be imposed by the facts of life—by a rise in prices that prevented people from consuming as much and by unemployment which prevented the workers from bargaining successfully for higher wages.

It may well be that in some countries of the sterling area this is the way devaluation will work out a balance in the international accounts. The political risks will be serious. But in Great Britain, as Sir Stafford Cripps said, and was bound to say, the classic consequence of devaluation will be resisted by the power of the government and of the labor movement. Sir Stafford tried to tell the British people that there would be no noticeable and serious reduction in their real wages and their standard of life. The question, therefore, will be whether the benefits of devaluation can nevertheless be achieved.

NOT, I think we had better tell ourselves, within the framework of the existing economic policies of Britain, the sterling area, and the United States. For within the present framework of their policies, the devaluation in itself is only a relief, like lancing a boil without curing the infection. None of the hard decisions has been made unnecessary. None of the heavy burdens, which in differing degrees all the free world must bear, have vanished. The devaluation has registered but it cannot liquidate the continuing crisis which is the aftermath of the wars, the revolutions and the disorders of this dark and barbarous century.

Correction

In an article on the Falls Church school system yesterday, The Washington Post erroneously stated that three top floor classrooms in the Jefferson School building have been "characterized as unsafe by an engineering consultant employed by the school board."

The classrooms referred to are structurally safe. The engineer has termed "unsafe," only the outside fire escape because it leads past the building's boiler room. The Washington Post regrets the error.

Miners Begin Coal Walkout

Co., which owns a mine at Robey, W. Va., said two tipple workers and a truck driver were beaten.

Thirteen truckloads of coal were dumped.

With miners sitting in the autumn sunshine above ground instead of digging coal, production fell off rapidly. Some States reported nonunionized strip mining continuing.

About 15,000 members of the Independent Progressive Miners worked in Illinois. They have no connection with the UMW. In one Illinois pit, miners struck against themselves. That's because the Marion County Coal Corp. at Glenridge is owned by the miners.

All of western Pennsylvania's 100,000 soft coal miners are idle, with sentiment strong in favor of staying out to preserve the union's $100 pensions and welfare benefits.

About 80,000 eastern Pennsylvania anthracite miners went out in sympathy. Their pension and welfare fund is administered separately. President Mark Brennan of UMW District 7 in the anthracite fields reported feeling is high for "no work until the welfare question is settled."

The State-by-State picture and the number of idle miners in each:

West Virginia, 120,000; Pennsylvania, 100,000; soft coal and 80,000 hard coal miners; Kentucky, 52,000; Ohio, 18,000; Alabama, 18,000; Illinois, 23,000 (not counting 15,000 independent union members); Wyoming, 7000; Virginia, 15,000; Indiana, 8000; Utah, 4300; Tennessee, 10,000; Colorado, 6000; Arkansas-Oklahoma, 6500; Kansas-Missouri, 2000; New Mexico, all 1200 to be idle tomorrow.

Fifty-six million to 60 million tons of coal are now above the ground. A normal supply is considered to be about 45 million tons.

The steel industry, now working at about 85 percent of capacity, is believed to have enough coal for about four weeks.

Utility companies, also large coal consumers, are thought to have enough coal for a month or two.

The average householder might soon run into trouble in the event of a long coal work stoppage. He hasn't been doing the stockpiling that industry has and might be caught with his bins empty in a sudden cold snap.

Miners in Virginia Apparently All Out

Norton, Va., Sept. 19 (AP).—Apparently all of Virginia's 14,000 union soft coal miners were idle today as a result of the United Mine Workers' "no pension, no work" walkout.

George Esser, president of the Virginia Coal Operators Association, said the walkout was "100 per cent complete" in the association's territory.

This embraces 39 mines in southwest Virginia and represents operations employing some 12,000 miners.

Apparently made idle too were the dozen Buchanan County mines represented by the Williamson (W. Va.) and Upper Buchanan Operators Associations. These reported all their mines idle as far as could be determined.

union was ready to bargain with the companies over "details" of how the pension and insurances plan will be put into effect.

But the union will not bargain on how much the companies should spend on the plans, he said.

Industry spokesmen have previously indicated that it was that very subject—how much the plans will cost—that they are most concerned about. They have objected particularly to the board's recommendation that the companies bear the full cost. The industry position is that the workers themselves should foot part of the bill.

Murray said, however, that financing of the plans entirely by the industry is one of the features of the board's report and the union will insist upon its inclusion in a contract.

Informed sources have reported that President Truman is ready, as a last resort, to recommend a settlement formula in the dispute as he did in the 1946 steel strike.

But it was emphasized that Mr. Truman would take no such action unless Ching reported that mediation conferences had failed to break the deadlock.

West Bound Lanes Opened on New $550,600 Bridge

Westbound lanes of a new $550,660 steel cantilever bridge over Boundary Channel between the end of Lee blvd. and the approaches to Memorial Bridge, went into use yesterday.

Lanes for District-bound traffic on the bridge, which replaces a timber temporary structure, should be completed within a few days, officials of the Federal Bureau of Public Roads said.

British Doctors Seek To Curb "Plan" Abuses

London (Tuesday), Sept. 20 (AP).—British doctors favor token payments by patients to discourage abuse of the nation's feeless medical plan, according to a survey published today in the medical magazine, Practitioner.

6 Drown in Michigan

Newaygo, Mich., Sept. 19 (U.P.).—Two men and four women were drowned today when a truck carrying 19 workers crashed through a guard rail of an open bridge into the Muskegon River.

The President's Calling List

President Truman yesterday had the following White House appointments:

11 a. m.—Robert Butler, Ambassador to Cuba.

11:15—Dr. George Taylor and members of emergency board in diesel dispute.

12 noon — Democratic State Chairman Paul Fitzpatrick of New York.

12:30 p. m.—Secretary of State Acheson.

Ford Strike Threatened by Auto Workers

Detroit, Sept. 19 (AP).—The CIO-United Auto Workers gave the Ford Motor Company strike notice today. The deadline is 12:01 a.m., Sept. 29.

A union spokesman said the notice resulted from the inadequacy of the company's offer on pensions. Neither the company nor the union would say what the offer was.

It was learned, however, Ford made a tentative pension offer. Under the reported proposal, the company would finance the pensions and employes would not be required to make contributions.

Union sources estimated the value of the offer at eight cents an hour. It was understood the offer would cover Ford's 115,000 employes providing pensions of about $50 a month for workers reaching the age of 68, exclusive of Social Security benefits.

Company spokesmen would not confirm the report it had made a noncontributory pension proposal which would depart from the stand taken by the steel industry. Steel has been insisting on workers sharing pension costs.

Despite the strike notice, bargaining talks went ahead. Negotiators broke off their session tonight without issuing any statement bu said talks would be resumed at 10:30 a.m. tomorrow.

The AUW served notice at a noon recess the current contract would automatically be terminated September 29 unless union demands are met. Both sides agreed the move was equivalent to a strike notice. The union said 100 days of negotiations had failed to produce satisfactory answers to either the economic or noneconomic demands of the union.

The union has asked a $100 a month pension, also exclusive of Social Security, payable at the age of 60.

Ford Executive Discouraged

Terming the contract termination notice "no great surprise but rather discouraging" Ford Vice President John S. Bugas said it was a "familiar union tactic" designed to speed settlement.

"It's the last squeeze of the vise," he said.

At the same time, however, he said the notice would not alter the company position and that Ford would not hesitate to settle before the Sunday night strike deadline in the steel industry.

"We regard the Ford problem," he said, "as one that excludes consideration of other industries, and even other auto companies."

2d Fireman on Diesels Refused by Board

By The Associated Press

A presidential emergency board yesterday rejected a union demand that railroads assign a second fireman on Diesel locomotives.

Saying there is no need for an extra fireman on any type of Diesel locomotive now in use, the board turned down the request made by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Fremen and Enginemen.

The board also rejected union demands for:

1. A fireman on rail motor cars; and

2. Equalization of pay for firemen on oil-burning and electric locomotives with pay scales on coal-burning and Diesel locomotives.

Recently the same board had denied a plea of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers for a second engineer on Diesels.

The firemen's union had contended an extra fireman on Diesels was needed from a safety standpoint and also because the more efficient Diesel engines were eliminating jobs of firemen.

Under railway labor law, the firemen's brotherhood must consider the report for 30 days before taking any strike action.

Members of the board reporting to the White House yesterday were Professors George W. Taylor of the University of Pennsylvania and George E. Osborne of Stanford University, and Grady Lewis, Washington attorney.

6251 Furloughs Announced by C. & O.

Cleveland, Sept. 19 (AP).—The Chesapeake & Ohio Railway will lay off 6251 employes this week because of the coal stoppage.

The furloughs, a spokesman said, will be divided as follows:

Mechanical division—2621; transportation division—1733; maintenance of way—1897.

The furloughs will be spaced out over the week as the trains stop running and probably will be completed by Friday midnight, the road announced.

Showdown Ahead

Leftists Win 1st Round in UEW Session

Cleveland, Sept. 19 (AP).—Battle lines were drawn today for a showdown fight to determine the future course of the 600,000-member CIO United Electrical Workers Union.

Left-wing administration forces demonstrated strength among delegates as the union opened its 14th annual convention in Public Auditorium. The convention election, scheduled Wednesday, will determine whether the union will continue under left or right wing leadership.

Left wing forces, headed by the union's international president, Albert Fitzgerald, won the convention's initial skirmish by gaining control of the credentials committee. This committee will determine the right of delegates to vote. It also won control of other committees.

Fitzgerald is opposed for the union presidency by Fred M. Kelley, of Lynn, Mass.

Anti-Red Resolution Adopted by Seamen

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—The CIO National Maritime Union today adopted an anti-Communist resolution which declared that "we will defend our country against any enemy, including the Soviet Union."

The resolution, adopted by a roll-call vote, was greeted with a roar of approval by a majority of the 600 delegates attending the union's seventh biennial convention.

Approval of the resolution indicated strongly that the NMU's right-wing faction, led by President Joseph Curran, was firmly entrenched in control of the big maritime union.

The convention hall was rocked by alternate cheering and booing as speakers debated the resolution for one hour and 47 minutes.

Langer Asks Probe Of Movie Firms in ECA Fund Check

By The Associated Press

Senator Langer (R. N. Dak.) proposed today an investigation of whether the movie industry has received "substantial sums of money" from the European Recovery Program.

He introduced a resolution that would direct the Senate Judiary Committee to inquire into:

"1. Whether there has been a misuse of power by collusion between the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. and Loew's, Inc.

"2. Whether there has been practiced such fraud and deceit by the management of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. as to warrant revocation of trading privileges in the stock of such corporation.

"3. Whether the Federal laws, including laws relating to the use of the mails to defraud, have been violated by the management of the Twentieth Century Film Corp.

"4. Whether the motion picture industry has received substantial sums of money which were deducted from allowances to various countries given under the Marshall plan."

Medicine Economics Study Urged

Medical students today should be trained in the economics of medical care along with their studies in the healing arts.

Lack of such training, said Dr. Raymond B. Allen, president of the University of Washington, Seattle, is "one of the vacuums" in medical education of today.

"And you all know who steps into the vacuum, the Government," he added.

Dr. Allen spoke in opening assembly of the 126th annual session of George Washington University Medical School. Assembled were 95 freshmen, more than 200 returning upper classmen, the school faculty, and more than a score of guests distinguished in medical science and education.

Urging the medical students to interest themselves in "problems of medical services to the ultimate consumer," Dr. Allen added in obvious reference to threats of nationalized medicine:

"We do not want a radical solution that will create greater problems than the ones to be solved."

On leave from his school as director of the medical services division, Office of the Secretary of Defense, Dr. Allen urged broader training of doctors in the whole field of social sciences, psychology and psychiatry as well as social economics.

Another speaker, Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, GWU president, told the students he does not share the concern of others "who feel that medicine is losing a great deal in the passing of the general practitioner."

Medicine, he said, is rapidly dividing into two very distinct branches, the specialized application of medicine and the diagnosis and treatment of mankind's ills.

"Even our hospitals are going to specialize more and more," he declared.

In the same vein, Dr. Allen told the assembly:

"We would not have the skill and knowledge we have today were it not that specialization developed so rapidly."

Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn, dean of the medical school, said that the 95 freshmen were selected from 2991 applicants. Sixty percent of the number, he said, are veterans and the average age of the new class is 23½ years.

Deer Deaths Blamed on Nature

By The Associated Press

A mysterious epidemic that has killed hundreds of deer in Maryland, West Virginia and along the Applachia range may be nature's way of reducing over population.

At least, that's the opinion of two authorities—Brig. Gen. E. F. Bullene, commanding officer at the Army's Edgewood Arsenal in Marvland, and Dr. Adolph H. Schultz of the Johns Hopkins Medical School.

General Bullene, who wrote an article for the magazine Outdoor Life on the deer herds at Edgewood and Aberdeen, Md., said that where there is an overpopulation of any kind of wild game, nature remedies the situation with a disease.

Dr. Schultz, who has been a member of the Society of Mammalogy since it was founded some 40 years ago, also said the disease could be due to nature's system of checks and balances.

About 200 deer deaths were reported at Aberdeen Proving Ground, where a herd of nearly 2500 roamed the reservation. Nearly 100 carcasses were found in Hardy and Hampshire Counties in West Virginia, and deaths were reported also in North Carolina, Alabama and Kentucky.

Merchants' Tax Deadline Is Midnight

Tonight at midnight is the deadline for merchants to file their August sales tax returns, first under the new sales tax law.

Allan F. Brooke, administrator of sales tax for the District, said yesterday that 3331 returns have been filed so far representing taxes of $288,910.

Fifteen thousand merchants registered under the sales tax law and the first month's returns are expected to total about a million dollars.

Several hundred merchants have been granted delays in filing their returns, Brooke said.

Officials Plan Tour Of SE Area

The District today will attempt to show residents of Marshall Heights that it is impractical at present to extend water and sewer lines to the hilly area.

Two streets in the 180-acre development at the eastern tip of the District have been staked out to indicate what grading and building plans would have to be made to bring in the facilities.

Representatives of the Highway Department, Department of Sanitary Engineering, Health Department, Department of Inspections and the Engineer Commissioner's office will meet with citizens at 1:30 p. m. at the corner of Astor and 49th sts. se.

The group will tour the two streets walking east on Astor st. to 54th st., south to Call pl., east on Call pl. to Southern ave. and return on Call pl. to St. Louis st.

Officials will discuss development of the area as provided under the District highway plan in existence for a number of years.

At a meeting at the District Building last month city officials pointed out to residents that development of the area under the plan will result in standard assessments for sewer and water mains. Because of the rugged topography and present layout of streets, the assessments would be high and beyond the reach of most residents, officials said. The tour will show residents just how much work will have to be done.

Building of any kind in the area, both by residents and by the District, is at present frozen pending a decision on complete redevelopment of the area.

Salaries of clergymen of the Presbyterian Church U. S. A. in Greater Washington are well above the national average, it was reported yesterday.

A committee from the Presbytery of Washington City, headed by former denominational moderator Wilbur LaRoe, jr., reported that the average salary here is $5089.48, including home or rental allowances.

LaRoe said the national average is about $3000. Twenty-six of the 42 churches and three missions in the Presbytery have given salary increases to their ministers during the past year, he reported. Average increase, LaRoe said, is $470.

Auto Allowance Urged

In most cases, LaRoe told a meeting of the Presbytery at the Presbyterian Church in Vienna, Va., ministers receive no allowance for upkeep of their automobiles. He pointed out that a clergyman uses his car more for his work than for personal activities, and urged churches to give their pastors an allowance for automobile maintenance.

Charles T. Clayton, in a report of the Trustees of Presbytery, stressed the need for Presbyterian churches in recently developed areas. Plans for three Presbyterian churches in such areas are now being worked out.

Presbytery owns an acre of ground near Jefferson Village in Fairfax County, Va., and a meeting of members of Falls Church Presbyterian Church and residents of the area on October 2 will discuss plans for erecting a church on the site.

Shipley Group Organized

A group has been organized in the Shipley Terrace area in Southwest Washington near the District line, and now meets in an apartment basement for Sunday services. Trustees of Presbytery are now looking for a site for a church for the group, known as the Green Valley Mission.

Eastminster Presbyterian Church was organized in 1947, and the Rev. Graham Northcott called as its minister last spring. At present the group meets in a house near Cheverly, Md., but facilities are not large enough for the growing congregation, and plans for eventual erection of a church building are under discussion.

Rear Admiral Stanton W. Salisbury, new Navy Chief of Chaplains, attended the meeting and was welcomed as a member of the Presbytery of Washington City. Chaplain Salisbury, ordained a Presbyterian minister in 1916, was formerly a member of the Presbytery of Connecticut Valley. The Rev. William N. Vincent, pastor of Eastern Presbyterian Church and a former Navy chaplain, introduced the new Navy Chief of Chaplains to Presbytery.

PUC to Hear Pros, Cons of Transit Radios

Bus and streetcar riders who find Capital Transit's "music as you ride" program irritating rather than soothing to the nerves (or vice versa) will have a chance ot air their own views.

The Public Utilities Commission said yesterday it will hold a public hearing October 27 to determine whether the music, news and commercials broadcast on the carriers are "consistent with public convenience, comfort and safety."

The PUC said it has received a number of letters protesting the programs now heard in more than 200 buses and streetcars. The Capital Transit Co., for whom the programs are a source of revenue, said that surveys show an overwhelming number of passengers favoring the entertainment.

The transit company initiated the programs in the District last February after they had proven successful in several other cities.

Music of the light classical type is interspersed during the broadcasts with news bulletins and commercials.

Bridges Accepts Judge's Plan to Arbitrate Strike

San Francisco, Sept. 19 (AP).—A Federal Judge today suggested a plan for arbitrating the Hawaiian longshore strike, and Longshoremen's President Harry Bridges promptly termed the plan acceptable.

Federal Judge George B. Harris, sitting in litigation arising from the 143-day old strike of the CIO union, proposed arbitration by a Federal judge and one representative each of the union and employers.

"You can call it a recommendation and/or a directive," he said, after asserting that proceedings to date have been useless.

Bridges' International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union said it was willing to recommend that the Hawaii strikers immediately return to work on the basis of Harris' plan.

Navy Man Convicted In Parked Car Crash

Navy Lieut. Joseph W. Wallace, jr., 35, of 203 Oxford st., Chevy Chase, Md., was convicted yesterday of leaving the scene after a traffic accident.

According to Municipal Court charges, a car driven by Lieutenant Wallace struck a parked car on Connecticut ave. nw., but did not stop until two cars driven by civilians hemmed his car in.

Wallace said he did not remember hitting a car and that he recently suffered a concussion when struck by a sailboat boom, resulting in a dazed condition, police testified.

Sentence was continued for two weeks pending a probation office report.

Sailor Describes Fire Day Before Lake Ship Burned

Toronto, Ontario, Sept. 19 (AP).—A crew member said today that 24 hours before the S.S. Noronic became a flaming death trap, there had been a smaller fire in one of her staterooms.

"That was why someone found a fire extinguisher empty when he tried to use it," said Crewman Marvin Brown, 16, of Sarnia, Ontario. "It had been used to put out the fire on B deck. . . ."

Brown said he had seen some of the crew standing around unaware for a while of the bigger blaze Saturday night. It was this conflagration which turned the Great Lakes pleasure steamer into a fiery shell, taking at least 121 lives. Eighty-four passengers still are among the missing, but many of them may have returned to their homes without reporting their escape. Most of the 511 passengers were Americans.

2 Czech Pilots Flee To German U. S. Base

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

GOLF'S SAUCY SEX, the career girls of the game, will be in full swing at the Prince Georges Country Club this week. It's the National Women's Open, and the gals this time are organized and looking down the throats of the male troupers who have been cutting up the tournament circuit swag.

The girls are playing now under the banner of the Ladies' Professional Golf Association, or will be before the week is out. They're forming their own organization tomorrow in Washington, under the aegis of Fred Corcoran who knows his way around tournament committees with the know-how of where the dough can be tapped.

POVICH

There are only 14 known pros among the women golfers, but 10 of them will be on the scene at Prince Georges. They are giving Corcoran a three-year contract to arrange their tournament tours. In that respect, the babes are smart. They picked the right man.

It was Corcoran who took pro golf out of the bush leagues and made it a whopping business. As tournament manager of the PGA, he found the pros playing for the meager total of $80,000 in purses in 1937. He wheedled guarantees of more than $550,000 before he quit 'em years ago.

IE IS SUSPECTED that the women did not get the ieda of a Ladies' PGA all by themselves, and that Corcoran initiated the whole business. He was in a pretty good position to do that. The gal golfers were from hunger in most cases, after turning pro, and Corcoran was giving them something to latch onto.

His references were obviously good. Father Corcoran doesn't traffic with trifling enterprises. He is the personal representative of Ted Williams, Stan Musial and Babe Didrikson. The Babe cleaned up more than $100,000 under his wing in 1947-48 after turning pro following her victory in the British Women's Ameteur.

"I'm doing all right with Williams and Musial, too," admits Corcoran. "Of course, like Didrickson, they're great to work with. They go out and perform and they're easy to sell. But too many headliners stumble around giving their services away. I put them in line for indorsements, movie work, books and appearances that put money in the bank for 'em. But when Williams and Musial take their bats up to the plate, they're on their own."

CORCORAN, naturally, has plans for the girls. "We're not going to be greedy. The men pros won't look at a winter tournament that doesn't guarantee $10,000 in purses, or $15,000 for the summer tournaments. The Ladies PGA is asking only $3500 for guaranteeing a field of the top stars. At Prince Georges, it will be our first showing, but we're already in demand. We have requests now to fill six tournament dates."

Helen Hicks, Corcoran recalls, was the first golfing girl to turn pro. That was in 1931, after she won the amateur title. Patty Berg and Helen Dettweiler were others to get the idea early. The latest is Marilyn Smith, former collegiate women's champ. Betty Jameson, Louise Suggs, Betty Mims White, Betty Hicks, Sally Sessions and, of course, Didrikson, are the other pros in the Prince Georges field.

"Naturally we're depending on the amateur girls to help round out our fields," says Corcoran. "Girls like Peggy Kirk, Polly Riley, Grace Lenczyk and little Marlene Bauer are as big gate attractions as most of our pros. They won't be competing for the cash prizes but they can any time they want join our Ladies' PGA, and we'll welcome them."

BABE DIDRIKSON, of course, is the girls' composite of Hogan-Nelson Snead as a gate attraction. When Didrikson is playing in any tournament, the girls can claim that they have a babe who has actually beaten Byron Nelson and Bobby Locke in exhibition matches. She threw a 69 at Locke to outscore his 70 at Montreal a while back, and she outshot Nelson with a 72 to his 76. In a pro-amateur tournament at Phoenix, the Babe once shot a 67 with her own ball.

The newest sensation among the girls, however, is pert little Marlene Bauer, an amazing 15-year-old, who is a threat to win any women's tournament. Daughter of a Long Beach, Calif., golf pro, she has been playing the game since she was a tyke of 3 and in three consecutive rounds at Long Beach had scores of 69-70—71 to her credit.

Corcoran is surrounding this first of his Ladies' PGA tournaments with big-league trappings. He has engaged Specs Hammond, long-time announcer and first-tee master of ceremonies of the U. S. G. A., to officiate. Every big-name gal golfer, pro and amateur, is in the field. The tournament ought to be a beaut, and a tremendous kickoff for the golfing gals, who never did admit it was wholly a man's world.

SURE, THEY'RE SISTERS—But no sister team. Marlene (right) and Alice Bauer, who hail from California (and California hails 'em, too) will be trying individually for the championship when the National Women's Open starts Thursday at Prince Georges Country Club. They are pictured after a practice round yesterday. Marlene's 15, Alice, 21

Cavarretta's Single in 8th Lone Cub Safety

Chicago, Sept. 19 (AP).—Phil Cavarretta's eighth-inning single spoiled Rex Barney's bid for a no-hitter today but the Brooklyn speed artist pitched a brilliant one-hit, 4-0, shutout against Chicago.

The 25-year-old righthander who hurled a no-hit, no-run game against the New York Giants, September 9, 1948, the last in the majors, faced a total of 28 batters.

Cavarretta, who had been shaken up while trying to make a shoestring catch of Jackie Robinson's single to short right in the first of the eighth, connected cleanly with Barney's first pitch in the Cub eighth.

St. Louis, Sept. 19 (AP).—Rookie Outfielder Eddie Sanicki drove in three runs with a home run and a fly tonight as the Philadelphia Phillies coled off the redhot St. Louis Cardinals, 4 to 3, behind the steady pitching of another rookie, Southpaw Johnny Thompson.

The loss cut the Redbirds' lead over the second-place Brooklyn Dodgers to a game and a half.

Yanks Beat Tribe, 6-0, On Ed Lopat's 5-Hitter

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—Lefty Ed Lopat boosted the New York Yankees' American League lead over the idle Boston Red Sox to three full games today with a five-hit shutout of Cleveland, 6-0.

Lopat's second straight scoreless job left the Indians, defending world champions, on the brink of elimination. Now fourth, a half game back of idle Detroit, Cleveland trails the Yanks by 9½ games with only 11 to play. While they play Boston the next two days, the Yanks will meet the Chicago White Sox.

Cecil Isbell 'Resigns' as Colts' Coach

Baltimore, Sept. 19 (AP).—Cecil Isbell took the graceful way out by resigning today as coach of the battered Baltimore Colts and Walter S. Driskill was pulled out of the front office to take the job.

Directors of the All-America conference team emphasized Isbell resigned after four straight trouncings this season. But the one-time professional passing star hinted it was that or else be fired.

"Quitting is the nice way to put it," Isbell said.

He was in his third year here, both coach and team starting their professional careers in 1947. The 33-year-old mentor came to Baltimore after five years of coaching his alma mater, Purdue.

He'll be paid in full for a two-year contract expiring this year. As for the future, Isbell said he didn't know of a thing."

Babe, Marlene Bauer Head Field for Women's Open

By West McLean
Post Reporter

The Babe and the Teenager.

Those are the two who will draw the galleries for the Women's National Open, starting Thursday at Prince Georges County Club. The Babe is the fabulous Mildred Didrikson Zaharias. The teenager is 15-year-old Marlene Bauer, National Junior champion and sensation of the Women's Amateur last week in Philadelphia.

The Babe is the defending champion. She won the Open in Atlantic City last year with 75-72-75-78—300. She was named the Woman athlete of the year in 1932, 1945, 1946 and 1947.

Miss Bauer is the youngest girl ever to reach the semifinal round of the Women's Amateur. Marlene is also one of the youngest golfers ever to break 80. She first broke into the 70s at the tender age of 10; Bobby Jones couldn't do it until he was 11.

She started playing when she was slightly over 3 years old and with her sister, 21-year-old Alice, she has won every amateur title in California for women.

The two petite misses, neither of whom weigh much over 100 pounds, pack the kick of mules in their shots. They both take extremely long backswings.

Both are blue-eyed blondes, but where Marlene plays a cold, calculating game, keeping a poker face, Alice has an infectious grin and occasionally rises to the frustration of a misplaced shot or bad lie.

Their father, David Bauer, a golf pro in Los Angeles, says that Alice has a more natural game but that Marlene has the concentration and relaxed control to be the better player.

The two young misses played Prince Georges for the first time yesterday, and from the back tees Marlene turned in a 40, 38—78 card, while Alice had 41, 40—81.

Kiner Hits 50th Homer, Bucs Lose

Pittsburgh, Sept. 19 (AP).—Ralph Kiner, Pittsburgh left fielder, smashed his fiftieth home run of the year tonight to establish a National League record but the New York Giants nipped the Pirates, 6-4, as Dave Williams homered in the first of the tenth with one on.

Kiner, who got his circuit clout in the second inning, became the first player in the National League twice to hit 50 or more homers in a season.

Duke Frosh Get 'Lift'

Don't Look for Video Glimpse of Caps; Brasher May Stay Out to Extend Eligibility

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

FEATHERWEIGHT Jimmy Cooper, recent conqueror of Manuel Ortiz, has received offers from Melbourne, Manila, Mexico City and Havana, but is delaying acceptance to fight for Matchmaker Gabe Menendez at Turner's Arena October 3 . . . With the addition of Steve Klisanin to the squad, Duke's freshman football team should be one of the strongest in the land. Klisanin is a champion weightlifter from McKeesport, Pa. . . . If Center Jim Brasher, who injured his back in Saturday's scrimmage with Pennsylvania, hasn't fully recovered in two weeks, Maryland plans to hold out the Texas senior for the season, extending his eligibility . . . Mike Uline is demanding $75,000 for television rights to 35 Caps home games this season, which means the games will not be televised. He received $300 for video rights to each of the Caps' 30 home games last season . . .

ACCORDING to Coach Bob Margarita of Georgetown, the ideal quarterback for a T-formation team is a "cross-eyed, left-handed passer. He'd fake you dizzy" . . . One of the reasons Sophomore Jimmy Lesane will probably be Virginia's regular quarterback is that "he has motions like Justice and anyone who does anything like Justice is my man," says Cavalier Coach Art Guepe . . . Johnny Shullenbarger, George Washington's ace punter, took up kicking as exercise for a childhood accident which cost him part of his foot. He averaged 44 yards per boot in 1946 . . . Georgetown's "G" Club will honor Father Herlihy, faculty athletic supervisor, at a luncheon in the Burlington Hotel a week from Wednesday. The Hoya football coaching staff will be present and movies of Saturday's GU-Holy Cross game will be shown . . .

. . . Duke Wyre, Terp trainer; Warren Giese, end coach; Bill Cobey, graduate manager of athletics; and George Carroll, sports publicity director, shot one of the snappiest rounds of golf in the history of the Easton, Md., Country Club recently. Giese had a 62, Wyre and Carroll tied with 67s and Cobey had a 75. The four plan to play the second nine next week . . . The remodeled, refurnished Touchdown Club reopens Saturday night . . . With Cece Isbell out and Walter Driskill in, look for Lu Gambino to play a bigger part in the fortunes of the Baltimore Colts. Gambino and Isbell didn't hit it off too well.

Williamson System Hits 92 Pct. Rate 1st Weekend

By PAUL B. WILLIAMSON

THE OPENING last week of the 1949 collegiate season turned out to be remarkably free of ties. Of 146 games reported—including a few from the previous week—there were only two ties.

It was the fewest ties reported in opening week during the 18-year history of the Williamson Rating System. The system attained a prediction rate of 92 per cent, the highest of any opening week in its history.

Highlights of the system's consistency on Saturday included: Santa Clara 7, California 21; T.C.U. 28, Kansas 0; Villanova 35, Texas A & M 0.

A few games turned out to be slight surprises because of top-heavy scores, although the system picked all the winners. These included: Texas Western 47, Brigham Young 6; Idaho 79, Williamette 0; Kentucky 71, Mississippi Southern 7; Texas 43, Texas Tech 0.

Sobretodos 3½-Length Winner of Marlboro Feature Race

Bill Bennings . . .

AT MARLBORO

DEAR FOLKS: Apprentice Nolan Griffith is leading the riders with seven winners and may be heard from during the Maryland mile season. Eddie Blind, starter for the Laurel meeting opening on Saturday, was a visitor. He has been schooling horses out of the gate at the Baltimore blvd. track. Palmer Haegerty, ace chart caller for the Racing Form, came down from Atlantic City. Laurel is his next assignment. One of the bigwigs of the Nats was here. The only horse I saw him bet on finished last, which at least made him feel at home. Only three more racing days here in the tobacco country. See you on the rail. BILL.

Helen Dear Red Wrack Are 2d, 3d

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Marlboro, Md., Sept. 19.—Making his twelfth try of the year, Louis Waingold's Sobretodos finally visited the winner's circle in today's feature, the Clinton claiming purse.

The 6-year-old, operated by apprentice, Dick Lawless, was eased into the finish line three and a half lengths in front of the closest opposition.

W. I. Jones' Helen Dear was second in the field of eight with Mrs. Mary Knieriem's Red Wrack third with Mrs. L. Lamm's Swing High forced into fourth position.

Sobretodos, improving with each recent start, returned a $14.80 mutuel to his scattered backers in an estimated crowd of 5500. The chestnut son of Coldstream was clocked in 1:56 for the mile and a sixteenth over a fast track and under smiling late summer skies.

Two well-played horses teamed to produce a $17.60 pay-off on the 4-3 tickets on the daily double. Mrs. H. S. Grinder's Alarosa took the first race under the handling of Apprentice Nolan Griffith and paid $5.80; Johnny Tammaro booted Halogi, owned by S. H. Rogers of Washington, home in the second race at $5.20.

Louise Sayers' 52 Wins Publinx Medal

Truman Presents Cantrell Regatta Cup Today

By Happy Walker

The Bill Cantrell (driver) and Horace Dodge (owner) combination will be awarded the $25,000 President's Cup Regatta Trophy after all: a decision enthusiastically applauded in speedboat racing circles.

Cantrell and Dodge will receive the magnificent cup from President Truman at the White House at noon today. It was decided to rescind Sunday's no-contest decision because the two final heats were cancelled by rough water.

Late yesterday Eric Greenleaf, general chairman, came out of a huddle with other officials and announced that Chuck Gardiner, race chairman, had declared Saturday's running of the first heat won by Cantrell in My Sweetie to be a contest. Thereupon approval of Cantrell's records for heat and lap time in the first heat, were dispatched at once to the American Power Boat Association headquarters in Detroit.

Here is the reasoning behind the action: Cantrell piled up 800 points for fastest heat and fastest lap in addition to his 400 points for winning the heat. Had the remaining heats been run, under Sunday's hazardous conditions, it is improbable that Cantrell's bonus points would have been wiped out.

It was recalled yesterday that once before a similar situation arose in the President's Cup running, but for a different reason. In 1931 Bill Freitag, driving Johnny Schibe's Miss Philadelphia, was fatally injured when his craft overturned on the Anacostia River course.

Commander W. Emmitt Davis, general chairman, Naval Gun Factory Marine Pageant Committee, announces the final meting of the general committee today at 3:30 p. m. at the Burlington Hotel. Final plans for the mammoth marine parade and pageant to take place October 1 will be approved.

Plenty of Prizes

All Was Fair At Solomons Fishin' Party

By Ralph Murdock

BEST of all.

That's what fishermen were saying yesterday about the fourteenth annual Chesapeake Bay Fair, held over the weekend at Solomons Island, Md.

MURDOCK

Fifty pirzes were awarded. It was one of those outings where you simply couldn't lose. If you failed to capture a prize, you could even up matters by putting a dent in the 150 dozen hard-shell crabs served after the various contests.

With the presence of Governor Lane of Maryland, State Senator Louis Goldstein of Calvert County, the courtesies of the Coast Guard and the untiring efforts of affable Edgar Bowen, president of the 1949 shindig, the "fair" turned out to be quite an affair. Prizes for the youngest angler over 3 years of age, the oldest, and the fattest, were just a few of the awards that were made.

Timothy C. Carson, who has lived three more days than three years, took the prize for the youngest; John W. Smith, Wilmington, Del., 81 years young, grabbed high honors for being the oldest angler, and F. C. Good, Pittsburgh, who only weighs a mere 300 pounds, captured the prize for being the heaviest fisherman.

APPROXIMATELY 400 yachts and fishing boats with pennants and decorations made the fair an extremely colorful one. The yacht Paroma, a 71-foot cruiser, was pronounced the best decorated craft. The Washingtonian landing the largest rockfish turned out to be Dan Galan. It weighed 9 pounds 1 ounce.

Mrs. Y. Sadel Danzansky was the successful feminine angler who turned in 16 different species of fish. We understand there are only 17 catchable varieties in the Chesapeake Bay. It was almost a "Grand Slam" and a whale of a fishing performance.

Attention: Mr. Murdock

Tampico, Mex., Sept. 19 (AP). Rodolfo Sosa Fernandez went fishing with his father yesterday and had to call a truck to beach his catch. It was a 16-foot, 950-pound sierra. The catch was made off a dock in Panuco River.

Bunn TKO's Perry in 10th

One-time fistic hot-shot of Washington, Perry was a tenth round TKO victim of Sonny Bunn, local welterweight making his first featured performance.

Bunn floored Perry twice for nine counts in the last round and seemed headed for a clean knockout when Referee Ray Bowen stepped in and halted proceedings.

It was an even fight until the last round when the younger Bunn landed repeatedly and solidly with overhand rights and stinging left hooks.

The season's first indoor card was witnessed by a crowd of 1000 who paid $1792.75.

In a slam-bang, toe-to-toe struggle Leon Daugherty outlasted Gene Harley in a five-round semi-windup. A strong finish enabled Daugherty to win. Daugherty weighed 148 and Harley 151.

Ben Harrison, Washington heavyweight, weighing 202, took a five-rounder from Clyde Williams of Hinton, W. Va., 204. Williams had Harrison on the deck in the third round.

'Skins Send Guard Lazor to Wilmington

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Evanston, Ill., Sept. 19.—The Washington Redskins were a single man over the 32-player limit today when they sent Andy Lazor, a standout guard in yesterday's 35-24 triumph over the Green Bay Packers, to their farm club in Wilmington, Del.

Lazor, 200-pound rookie from Washington State, was detached a few minutes before the 'Skins left Milwaukee for this college town, where they will undergo a week's work before next Monday night's National Football League opener against the Chicago Cardinals.

While his former teammates gloated over their latest victory, there were tears in the 24-year-old lineman's eyes when he received the bad news. The Redskins coaching staff assured him, however, that he would have another chance next year, possibly sooner.

The 'Skins now boast one rookie, Herb Siegert of Illinois, and four experienced guards. Before game time next Monday they must dispose of one more man and the finger seems to be pointing at the ends. Seven wingmen, instead of the usual six, are now on the roster.

While he decided on his final "cut," Coach Billick Whelchel was justifiably proud today of his prediction that the Redskins would play "screwy but interesting" football this season. They certainly did it yesterday.

Everybody made mistakes. Even old-timers like Dick Poillon, who purposely touched a punt and allowed the Packers to recover, got into the act. Dan Sandifer fumbled four times. There were penalties galore, and intercepted passes, and numerous cases of bad judgment.

But when it was over, the Redskins were well out in front and Milwaukee was pleased with Harry Gilmer, who quarterbacked the entire game while Sammy Baugh rested his bruised ribs on the bench.

Harry completed only seven passes all day, but four of them were for touchdowns. He did a little fancy running, too.

When Fullback Ed Quirk's ankle was hurt so badly he'll be out of action for three weeks, Gilmer had Pete Stout to handle the fullback assignments, and they couldn't have been handled better. Burly Leon Cochran spelled Stout for a while and also looked good.

The Redskins had a big, hard-charging and mean line up front, too. It took a lot of credit for the poor showing of the Packers' new star, Stan Heath of Nevada, by rushing him with no mercy.

BRIEFLY—Center Al Demao who intercepted a Heath pass and turned halfback, with stiff-arming and everything, says he wasn't trying to score a touchdown . . . "I was just trying to get to the sideline as quickly as possible".

Air Earnings In 1947 Series Cited in Suit

New York, Sept. 19 (U.P.).—Frederic Johnson, attorney for Danny Gardella in his $300,000 suit against organized baseball, told Commissioner A. B. Chandler today that the sport definitely was involved in inter-state commerce because of radio and television commitments.

Johnson and Chandler, former classmates in the Harvard Law School in 1924 met for the first time since leaving school and renewed their old friendship before appearing as opponents in a pre-trial examination in Federal District Court.

Johnson charges Gardella, former New York Giant outfielder has been deprived of making a livelihood in organized professional baseball, not only in the majors but in eventhe lowliest class D minor league because he was blacklisted by the commissioner when he jumped from the Giants to the Mexican League in 1946.

"We are setting out to prove that professional baseball is in inter-state commerce to the 'nth' degree because television and radio didn't exist in 1922 when the Supreme Court of the United States decided in the Federal League case that baseball was not in inter-state commerce," he said.

Upon examination by Johnson, Chandler admitted that the Mutual Broadcasting Co. and the Gilette Safety Razor Co. paid from $150,000 to $175,000 for the radio rights to the 1947 World Series. Chandler also said there was an additional $65,000 revenue from television.

Long Classification Bill Revised on Eve of Debate

The Long pay-reclassification bill to benefit the Government's 850,000 classified workers is being revised on the eve of congressional debate on it.

Senator Long (D., La.), who will manage the bill in the Senate, has agreed to restore grades CAF-6, 8 and 10—grades that had been wiped out in his original bill. His revised bill will have a single schedule of 18 grades to be made up by a member of CAF, P, and SP grades, the same formula used in the Murray bill, which is before the House.

Long and his subcommittee had hoped to knock out most of the salary overlapping between grades by the elimination of the present grades of CAF-6, 8 and 10. But in the process an injustice would have been done many of the employes who are in the upper levels of those three grades.

For example, a survey revealed that more than 5000 employes would have had their salaries "frozen" the moment they were converted to the Long schedule. These people would have been in a salary bracket of three or more steps over the maximum of their respective new grades. They wouldn't have been eligible for in-grade promotions or longevity pay boosts.

Other thousands would have been limited to one or two in-grade promotions and longevity increases as long as they held their jobs. Both the Senate and the House bills provide for longevity pay boosts—a maximum of three in-grade raises over the top of all grades—and this provision would have been nullified for many employes in the three grades under the original Long bill.

Meanwhile, Senate Majority Leader Lucas announced yesterday that he hoped to call up the five pay bills the latter part of this week. He said the bill to raise the pay of military men and women would be the first to be considered, to be followed by the executive, classified, postal and legislative pay bills. Senator Flanders (R., Vt.) is likely to introduce the legislative bill as an amendment to either the executive or classified bill because of the undercover opposition to it.

The House is expected to take up both the classified and postal pay bills a week from today. Its Rules Committee cleared both measures for full House debate a few hours before its members went off on their holiday.

STORY: This is why people in Government information offices are long suffering. A man with a patch in the seat of his once-expensive pants went up to the information office at Civil Service and inquired about a Government public relations job. The clerk there handed him an application blank for Civil Service test for information speecialists. The man glanced at it for a moment and then he exploded and lectured the clerk:

"I am not looking for an examination. I want an appointment. I am insulted that a man of my education should be asked to take an examination like a kid in school."

FTC: Now that the Senate has confirmed the nomination of John Carson to be a member of the Federal Trade Commission, you can look for the President to renominate Lowell Mason, a Republican, for a new five-year term.

INQUIRY: The Senate Civil Service Committee has called on the Civil Service Commission to supply it with the complete file of the hearing examiner test.

The three subcommittee members—Johnston (D., S. C.), Humphrey (D., Minn.) and Dulles (R., N. Y.)—will study the file in executive session before launching public hearings on the conduct of the controversial test. The opponents also will be invited to appear during the closed sessions to tell their sides of the story.

Police Raid Apartment, Hold Man on Game Count

'One-Armed Bandit' Slot Machines Removed From Willard St. House

Police removed four "one-armed bandit" type slot machines from an apartment at 1773 Willard st. nw. yesterday afternoon and arrested the occupant on a charge of setting up a gaming table.

He is John Henry Kendrick, 43, who told police he opeartes a rooming house. He was released under $2000 bond for appearance in Municipal Court today.

Police said a uniformed policeman in the Thirteenth Precinct called on Kendrick about 3:30 p. m. while making a routine investigation. Kendrick admitted him to the apartment with no objections, they said.

The policeman saw the slot machines and reported them to his superiors.

An hour later, Sergt. Philip Able and four other uniformed policeman went to Kendrick's apartment and were also admitted by him without any objection, according to police.

Police said he did not object when they put coins into the machines, two of which was for pennies, one for dimes and one for quarters. Both the dime and the quarter machines paid off in coins when they played them, police said and cigarettes were given for points on the penny machine. Police took Kendrick into custody after the payoffs, they said.

Kendrick admitted owning the machines and said he got them last Thursday, according to police. He refused to make any additional statement, they said.

Last week it was learned that the Federal Government had collected $3200 in taxes on illegal slot machines in Washington during the year ending June 30, 1949.

Of the 32 locations reported by the Bureau of Internal Revenue, 17 were in Washington, 13 of those being military installations.

4 Police Face Trial Board On Friday

Four policemen will face charges of misconduct at hearings to be held Friday by the Police Trial Board.

Three policemen are charged with manhandling James J. Witherspoon, 33, while arresting him June 9 at the Dunbar Hotel for allegedly taking the pocketbook of a woman who resides at the hotel.

Witherspoon said he suffered scalp lacerations and contusions of the right wrist.

The officers, Pvts. David H. Gould and Delbert D. Brill of the Thirteenth Precinct, and James A. Hansbrough of the Tenth Precinct, said Witherspoon resisted arrest and that the pocketbook was found in his room.

Hansbrough and Gould are charged with using "harsh and profane language," and willful maltreatment and unnecessary violence towards a prisoner. Brill is charged with willful maltreatment and unnecessary violence.

The charge of robbery lodged against Witherspoon was reduced to petty larceny on recommendation of the United States Attorney's office. It was dismissed by Judge Armond W. Scott in Municipal Court on grounds the charge should have been taking property without right.

Private George M. Nelson of the Seventh Precinct faces charges of conduct unbecoming an officer and prejudicial to the Police Department's good name. He "caused embarrassment to other police" while off duty and in civilian clothes at the scene of an accident at 12th st. and Maine ave. sw., on August 27, it was reported.

Stolen Property

Police Find $3500 Worth Of Tools

Recovery of $3500 worth of tools and equipment stolen over a two-month period in the Silver Spring area was announced yesterday by Montgomery County police, who arrested five teenagers Sunday night.

The youths, three of them 14 years old and two 15, were released in custody of their parents pending juvenile court proceedings. All were said to come from well-to-do families.

Three of the juveniles were arrested by Pvt. Leonard Seese of the Silver Spring station, who saw them siphoning gasoline from a power crane on a construction job at 13th st. and Eastern ave. After questioning, they implicated the other two, police said.

All confessed, police said. The loot was found hidden in basements of the boys' homes and in their rooms.

The youths told police they would meet by prearrangement at the place selected for looting and would carry off the loot on motor scooters.

The loot recovered included $1500 worth of surveyors' instruments, two complete public address systems, hundreds of radio tubes, several air guns and an assortment of tools.

Two Indicted In Firing Of Local Grill

The operator and an employe of Tex's Grill were indicted yesterday for setting fire to the 1361 H st. ne. eatery, causing damage estimated up to $17,000.

They are Richard R. (Tex) Baker, 46, who runs the restaurant, and William P. Corley, 517 K st. ne., the night manager of the grill.

Baker had insured the equipment in the restaurant for $6500, according to court papers. He had promised Corley part ownership in a Baltimore business and $50 a week additional to burn it, according to police.

While Baker was out of town, police said, Corley ignited several gallons of gasoline and peanut oil to cause the July 5 fire. He was apprehended after the fire burned him and he reported to a hospital for treatment.

Charges Listed

The pair were charged with maliciously burning the building and with burning it with intent to defraud.

This was among 36 indictments returned by the District grand jury in District Court.

Charged with first-degree murder was Joseph F. Burgess, 30, of 927 French st. nw. According to hospital reports, he stabbed Mrs. Helen Coplin, 33 ,of 1441 S st nw., 23 times.

Burgess and Mrs. Coplin had been going together for four years, when he heard her promise over the telephone to meet another man, Burgess said. He stabbed her with a butcher knife, according to police.

Fred L. Jack Robinson, 39, of Norfolk, Va., and a publication, Navy, Inc., were indicted on charges of giving false statements as to the destination of the magazine to postal authorities. This resulted in a lower rate, it was charged.

Lottery Indictment

Charged with operating numbers lotteries were Russell W. Enscore, 55, 1216 10th st. nw., and Owen J. Washington, listed as having been employed in the basement of 3817 Alabama ave. se.

Sesqui Fund Approved by Senate Unit

$3 Million Grant To Be Considered By Appropriations Committee Next For Two Jackpots

A three-million-dollar fund to finance the National Capital Sesquicentennial celebration here next year was approved yesterday by a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee.

The group, meeting in executive session, decided to include the full amount asked by Sesquicentennial Commission officials in the supplemental appropriation bill.

The bill, which also contains money to pay the retroactive District salary increases for the fiscal year ended last June, is slated for action by the full Senate Appropriations Committee today.

Subcommittee approval of the three-million-dollar sesquicentennial fund gave new hope to officials planning the celebartion that Congress would finally grant the money, despite two previous refusals by the House.

The House turned thumbs down on the appropriation when it was first requested early this year. Then the Senate recommended a two-million-dollar fund. But the House rejected the compromise plan.

Finally, after President Truman voiced his interest in the celebration to House leaders, the issue was again raised in the House, but again the fund was refused. If approved now by the Senate, the three-million-dollar grant would still require House indorsement.

3 New Polio Cases Bring Total to 159

Three new polio cases were reported yesterday in the Greater Washington area, bringing the total for the year to 159.

In Prince Georges County, two cases were reported: An eight-year-old girl from Ridge rd., Greenbelt, admitted to Children's Hospital on September 12, and an eight-year-old girl from the 5800 block of 66th ave., Riverside, admitted to Children's September 14.

The number of cases reported to date by area health officers follows:

Neely Plans Study of D. C. Departments

Senate District Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) said yesterday he plans to go on from his current round-table conferences on District affairs to a thorough study of the city government departments.

But he disclaimed any intention to concentrate the fire of an investigation on any particular District department, or any official of the city government.

A fourth session in "Mayor" Neely's conferences with District citizens on local needs is slated for 10 a. m. today. Frederick P. H. Siddons, president of the Washington Board of Trade, is scheduled to be the first witness, with some 25 others remaining to be heard.

Neely said published suggestions that he plans to hire committee sleuths to probe the District government had embarrassed him. There are two kinds of investigations, he said, one to get information, the other to build a case for prosecution. And it's the information-gathering kind he has in mind applying to the District government.

Rescue Chief's Resignation Hanging Fire

Donald W. Dunnington, chief of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad since its organization in 1938, has "definitely resigned," he said last night, although the organization's board of directors has not recognized his action.

He tendered the resignation verbally at midnight, Sunday night, after the board of directors suspended him from office for 30 days for disobedience to orders.

The sequence of events leading to the suspension and resignation became clearer last night. Dunnington said:

1. On Saturday, September 10, he was driving a squad vehicle homeward from a Prince Georges County volunteer firemen's parade when an emergency call was received by radio for a nursery school fire in Silver Spring. On the way he struck a culvert obstruction and two squad members were injured.

2. He suspended himself from duty as a driver, in accord with a squad regulation, and a trial board was set up.

3. The trial board on Thursday suspended his driving privileges for 30 days. He deemed this unjust and appealed to the board of directors.

4. On Friday morning, a call was received for a Chevy Chase child who had been seriously cut and was bleeding badly. Only four men responded, and no other driver, so he drove, notwithstanding the suspension.

5. Saturday night, the squad's large truck was to go out on public fund-raising duty, and no other driver was available, so he again drove, despite the suspension.

6. He was suspended from duty as chief pending the meeting of the board of directors. That board first upheld the decision of the trial board suspending his driving privileges for 30 days. Then it suspended him as chief for 30 days for disobedience. The board named Assistant Chief Leslie B. Thompson, who is president of the Montgomery County Volunteer Firemen's association, as chief during Dunnington's suspension.

Max B. Austell, board president, said yesterday that the board will not accept Dunnington's verbal resignation, and will do nothing on the question until the 30-day suspension is up.

Mothers Save Girls in Icebox out, both girls lapsed into unconsciousness. The screams brought Firemen Ellmore and Gray.

By the time an Alexandria rescue squad ambulance arrived, both children were conscious again.

At Alexandria Hospital, physicians checked the girls and then sent them home. The physicians estimated they had been in the box 20 to 30 minutes.

Gorman, at his office, heard of the near-tragedy and telephoned the Alexandria Housing Authority. Within an hour the boxes had been removed. He said later that a number of previous complaints and requests for removal of the boxes brought no action.

Fireman Ellmore's daughter, Sandra Jean, 3, had been playing with Margaret and Cheryl a short time before the two were imprisoned by the slamming door, but did not enter the box with them.

Both of the imprisoned girls said they cried for help but were not heard.

"There was a little hole and we could see out," they said, "but no one heard us. It was dark and we were scared."

$50 Reward Offered for Cat 'Cinder'

PRINCE CINDER
. . . missing royalty

Practically every cat in the 3500 block of 14th st. nw. has been turning up on the doorstep of Lawrence Gafney for the past eight days—all because of Cinder.

Cinder, it seems, is a direct descendent of a long line of Siamese princes, who was reported AWOL a week ago by his master, a disabled war veteran of 3513 14th st. nw.

Sympathizing with Gafney's heartbroken search for his buddy of many travels, the neighborhood kids have been bringing the 29-year-old former soldier one cat after another—always with the hope it would be Cinder.

So far, however, it's been no Cinder—just cats, big and little, morning and night.

And Gafney, more and more discouraged as time goes by, yesterday offered a $50 reward "for any information about the whereabouts of Cinder."

"The reward is my last hope," he said, "even though my wife and I can't afford it."

Man Who Threw Stones at Window Only Wins Arrest

A man who throws stones at a lady's window is more likely to get arrested than to win her heart, James F. Hill, 37, of 1236 11th st. nw., learned yesterday.

He was convicted in Municipal Court of threats and sentenced to post a $300 peace bond or serve 30 days in jail, all on the complaint of Miss Regina M. Moore, 35, of 704 3d st. nw.

She testified that when she refused to have anything more to do with Hill, he threatened to beat her to death and then threw stones at her window at 5 a. m. September 11.

Hill was quoted as telling policemen who came to investigate the commotion that he only was trying to get Miss Moore to come to church with him.

Gas Pipeline Completion Forecast by December 1

Will Bring Natural Gas Directly From Texas Fields, PUC Rate Hearing Told

By Tom Winship
Post Reporter

The new Clendennin, W. Va., to Rockville, Md., natural gas pipeline will be completed about December 1 unless there is a prolonged steel industry tieup, a Washington Gas Light Co. executive said yesterday.

Howard B. Noyes, vice president in charge of engineering, said the pipeline to augment the fuel supply to District customers is a 26-inch line, is 50 per cent completed and will bring natural gas all the way from the Texas oil fields.

The existing natural gas line is a 20-inch one and connects with Tennessee fields.

The company official gave this progress report as public hearings resumed before the District Public Utilities Commission on the firm's request for a 7 per cent rate increase.

Strike Would Slow Progress

Noyes commented that a long steel strike would very likely slow up construction of the new line by the Atlantic Seaboard Corp., which furnishes natural gas to Washington Gas Light Co.

Under questioning by William Roberts, attorney for the gas consumers and independent appliance dealers who are opposing the rate increase, Noyes also disclosed tentative company plans to abandon its gas manufacturing facilities here sometime in 1952.

Roberts was attempting to show that these seldom-used facilities should have been dismantled when the company converted to natural gas in 1948, and their maintenance cost should not be added to total operating costs as a basis for the requested rate hike.

To Supply Only Natural Gas

Noyes testified that, with addition of the new pipeline, the local gas utility firm intends to continue supplying only natural gas here. He said that under their 15-year contract with the Atlantic Seaboard Corp. the firm pays $1.30 per 1000 feet of natural gas, while it costs $1.65 per 1000 to manufacture gas.

The remainder of the day-long District Building session was devoted to cross-examination by Roberts of O. H. Ritenour, company comptroller, on how property depreciation is evaluated and the firm's sales promotion activities.

Roberts, for the independent gas appliance dealers, has been insisting through the hearings that the gas company has been "unfairly and illegally" competing in sale and installation of appliances.

Company exhibits show that $446,153 was spent on sales promotion in 1948.

The firm is seeking the 7 per cent rate increase to add $900,000 to its operating revenue. Company officials have testified their profits are on the decline.

V. A. McElfresh, PUC executive auditor, has already urged approval of the requested rate hike provided the company returns to the so-called sliding scale principle of rate-making.

The hearing, which ran August 30 and 31, will continue today with more cross-examination of company officials scheduled.

Family of Nine Escapes Safely As Home Burns

A family of nine escaped safely from their burning home near Redlands, Md., shortly before midnight Sunday after being awakened by passersby who observed flames leaping from the house.

Rescued persons were Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Seabolt and their seven children.

The fire started in a first floor room used for storage of furniture belonging to Clarence Gates, owner of the house. Damage was confined to the lower floor and was estimated by Gates at $2500.

Cause of the blaze could not immediately be determined, according to the Gaithersburg Volunteer Fire Department which put the blaze out.

Holober Ruled Sane in Killing Of Wife and Child; Faces Trial

Charles Francis Holober, accused of shooting his wife to death and then burying his 8-month-old baby alive alongside her, near a Fairfax County nudist camp last February, has been ruled sane and "capable of standing trial."

Holober

The Fairfax County Circuit Court was so informed yesterday by Dr. Joseph Bialock, superintendent of the Southwestern State Hospital at Marion, Va.

The 40-year-old former jewelry store clerk is "not insane and has not been insane or psycholtic since he was admitted to the institution," Dr. Bialock's report said.

After receiving the report, Judge Paul Brown deferred setting a trial date when informed former State Senator Frank L. Ball has withdrawn as counsel for the defendant.

Holober probably will be returned to Fairfax by Sheriff John Taylor next weekend, and will be given opportunity to obtain new counsel before further proceedings, court officials said.

Holober, 1216 Girard st., is accused of shooting his estranged wife, Frances, 37, of 931 New York ave., and then burying her in a shallow grave near a remote Fairfax County nudist camp last February 26. By his own admission, police say, he then buried his daughter, Joan, alongside her mother after he "lost his nerve" when he started to shoot the baby.

He has been indicted on two separate charges of murder.

Howard Uncertain About Dropsy Work

In Hyattsville

6-Member Board Quits At Library

Hyattsville City Council last night accepted the resignation of the six-member library board.

The board, in a letter, said it considered itself no longeer needed in view of the absorption of the city library into the county library system.

The council, after thanking the board for its service, said it agreed.

In its letter the board recalled it had opposed purchase of the gas company building next to the municipal building as a home for the city library.

It said the area was too commercial and that a section frequented by more pedestrians at night would be safer for youngsters.

Funds on hand, some $2050, were turned over to the council for purchase of library equipment.

Corson

The future of a major research project on dropsy, financed by the United States Public Health Service, at Howard University was uncertain yesterday following dismissal of Dr. Samuel A. Corson by the University.

He was a member of the school's medical faculty and director of the project. The University's board of trustees locked the doors of the institution on him at a meeting Saturday.

Other developments in the case yesterday were:

1. Dr. Corson said he had fought for "respect for scholars and scientific research" at Howard and sought a "democratic administration as against the archaic and autocratic one now in force."

2. University authorities still declined to make public the actual grounds on which the action was taken. However, they released the text of statements by a CIO faculty union, and a medical faculty committee, withdrawing from defense of Dr. Corson.

No Budget Funds

PHS officials said yesterday that the edema, or dropsy, research grant to Dr. Corson at Howard has been in a state of suspension since last June when Dr. Joseph Johnson, dean of the medical school, refused to sign budget disbursement forms.

That action led at the time to dismissal of two of Dr. Corson's research assistants, one of whom is now his wife. No budget forms have been received since for the project, the PHS officials said, and no action will be taken until further word is received from the University or Dr. Corson, or both.

Dr. Corson said last night he has not decided whether or not to accept an "in absentia" contract proffered him by Howard's board of trustees at a meeting. Saturday That contract would pay his salary on an "on leave" status until next June 30, but forbid him to carry on any activities at or concerning the university. It was the trustees' reply to his demand for a five-year appointment which would give him tenure in the institution.

Letter Released

University authorities released a copy of a letter signed by Winston K. McAllister, chairman of the Howard University branch, United Public Workers of America (CIO).

The union which earlier had demanded a five-year, tenure, contract for Dr. Corson, and failing that, arbitration, stated:

"In view of the fact that new allegations were raised in our meeting with your committee, the union withdraws its request that the board (of trustees) give Dr. Corson a tenure appointment. We also withdraw our request for arbitration."

The other statement, by Dr. Charles R. Drew of the Howard medical faculty, said that "we were interested in seeing that he (Dr. Corson) had a full and ample hearing, and that interest has been served. The faculty committee has no further function."

School Census Ordered for Falls Church

The Falls Church school board last night voted an immediate school census in the city and surrounding territory served by the three schools inside city limits.

The census, which will include children up to 19 years of age, will be used to estimate school needs for at least a five-year period.

Mrs. Mark Regan, school board chairman, said following a closed session of the school board last night the census would be made by Parent-Teachers Associations of the Madison-Jefferson School, the Oak Street School and the Falls Church High School.

P-TA representatives will meet with the school board at its next regular session Wednesday to discuss further plans, Mrs. Regan said.

The census information, she said, will be used, among other things, to locate prospective school sites.

No decision was reached last night on possible school sites, Mrs. Regan said, since reports of the site committee, headed by board member Rex Hinshaw, was incomplete.

Move to Delay Annexation Suit Denied

An effort by the City of Falls Church to delay court action on its annexation suit against Fairfax County was rebuffed yesterday in Fairfax Circuit Court.

Judge Paul Brown issued an order setting October 26 as the date for a three-judge hearing on the territorial dispute. The order was accompanied by a request to the Court of Appeals for appointment of three judges to hear the case.

Falls Church City Attorney LaRue Van Meter said the city is not yet prepared to proceed with the case, and asked for a "nonsuit"—in effect a withdrawal of the city's suit.

Judge Brown ruled the request for the three-judge court already had been filed by the city and that it was not within his power to halt the action. The request for the withdrawal, he said, would have to be made to the three-judge annexation court when it convenes.

Falls Church officials last week indicated they would halt temporarily their annexation plans, to "reappraise" sewer conditions in the proposed zone of annexation. Van Meter said the city desired to investigate the cost of taking over from Fairfax County any new sewer facilities which might be built in the area with part of a three-million-dollar bond issue authorized in a recent referendum.

W. D. Pawley, Jr., Elizabeth Taylor Break Engagement

Warrenton, Va., Sept. 19 (AP).—William D. Pawley, jr., son of the former Ambassador to Brazil, said today he and Elizabeth Taylor of the movies have "mutually agreed" to call off their engagement.

Asked if the picture commitments of Miss Taylor in Hollywood had anything to do with the decision, Pawley said:

"Yes, that had something to do with it."

Pawley had no other comment.

Miss Taylor's engagement was announced by her mother, Mrs. Francis Taylor, June 6, but no date was set for the wedding.

Celebrity-Studded Shows Officially Open Capital's Autumn Fashion Season

By Peggy Preston

MISTRESS FASHION shook a saucy finger at Washington's tardy weatherman yesterday, and launched her fall season despite the summerlike clime.

With customary ado, she simultaneously opened two of the town's most popular luncheon-fashion shows—in the Statler's Embassy Room and the Mayflower Lounge.

The Mayflower, it was announced yesterday, will also be the setting for a new series geared for the career girl who cannot take time off for luncheon shows. To be called "Six Fashions at Six," the show will take place each Friday during the cocktail hour and will feature six costumes for the young business woman.

The Statler's "Fashion Party," as it has been renamed this year, attracted a capacity gathering, with luncheon guests participating in the series of hectic stunts and and contests dreamed up by Austine and Mrs. Gladstone Williams, cocommentators for the event.

Among the Celebrities

GUESTS OF HONOR at the celebrity table included Mrs. Elath, wife of the Ambassador of Israel, and Mrs. Howard McGrath, wife of the Attorney General. Mrs. Elath, stealing a march in the fashion accessory line, attached a clever little clamp to the table and hung her handbag from it. This mighty handy gadget relieves its owner of trying to keep track of a slippery handbag throughout a luncheon. Trick is, though, not to forget to gather up it and the handbag when the time comes to leave.

Mrs. Omar Bradley was there, with her daughter, Mrs. Harold Beu Keme, Mrs. Francis Matthews, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, was also a guest.

At their regular table were Mrs. George Malone, Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mrs. Robert E. Schenck and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim. Miss Berta Joseph was seated alongside Mrs. Thomas Cowell of New York, and others in attendance included Mrs. Royce Powell, Mrs. Clark H. Woodward, Mrs. Peter Ansberry, Mrs. Arthur M. Hill and Mrs. William P. MacCracken.

Mrs. Clark Honor Guest

THE TREASURER of the United States, Mrs. Georgia Neese Clark—wearing a brown cloche that sported the tallest feather in the room—was a guest of honor at the Mayflower's fashion show and luncheon. Sharing honors were Mrs. J. L. Blair Buck, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs and Mrs. Hope Riding Miller. Their transcribed conversation was heard last night over station WMAL in the broadcast "Lunching at the Mayflower with Bab Lincoln."

Mrs. Buck has lately returned from a round the world trip and Mrs. Miller is just back in Washington from three weeks in Finland, where she and other American writers were guests of Finnish newspaperwomen.

The fashion show, presented by Jelleff's, featured "The Look of the Twenties" in this season's styles. The audience included Madame Ache, wife of the Naval Attache of the Brazilian Embassy; Princess Halim, Mrs. Frederick A. Britten, Mrs. C. J. Mack, Mrs. Roy St. Lewis, Mrs. George B. Tribble, Mrs. Duke Shoop, Mrs. Andrew E. Van Esso, Mrs. John E. Ball and Mrs. Robert McConnell, wife of Rear Admiral McConnell.

Columbia Hospital Sponsors Show

THE FIRST benefit fashion luncheon of the season will be held in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom on Tuesday, October 11. The women's board of Columbia Hospital is sponsoring the show: Julius Garfinckel & Co. is presenting Irene's collection straight from Hollywood.

Mrs. Francis C. Almirall, president of the women's board, has selected the following committee chairmen for the show: Mrs. Robert E. Moran, chairman; Mrs. D. Lawrence Groner, patronesses; Mrs. Robert W. Fleming, reservations; Mrs. Landra Platt, invitations; Mrs. Donald McKnew, programs, and Mrs. Eberhart Haynes, publicity.

Beauty School Opens

WHILE a part of Washington's feminine population was feasting its eyes on fall fashions, another group was seeking beauty secrets from a corps of trained technicians sent to town by Elizabeth Arden.

Miss Arden, who heretofore has reserved some of her finest beauty aids for clients who entered the red doors of her famous salons, has decided to make them available to the general public. And, just to be sure women understand how—and when—to apply them, she is sending her best technicians around the country to conduct "Beauty Classes."

The first in a series of such classes opened yesterday afternoon at Woodward & Lothrop's, and more than 300 women attended the session. Similar demonstrations will be held today through Friday at 10:30 a. m. and 2:30 p. m. Tickets, which are free of charge, may be obtained at the Elizabeth Arden booth on the main floor of the store's main building. All available tickets for today's sessions have been taken, however, so make your plans to attend later in the week.

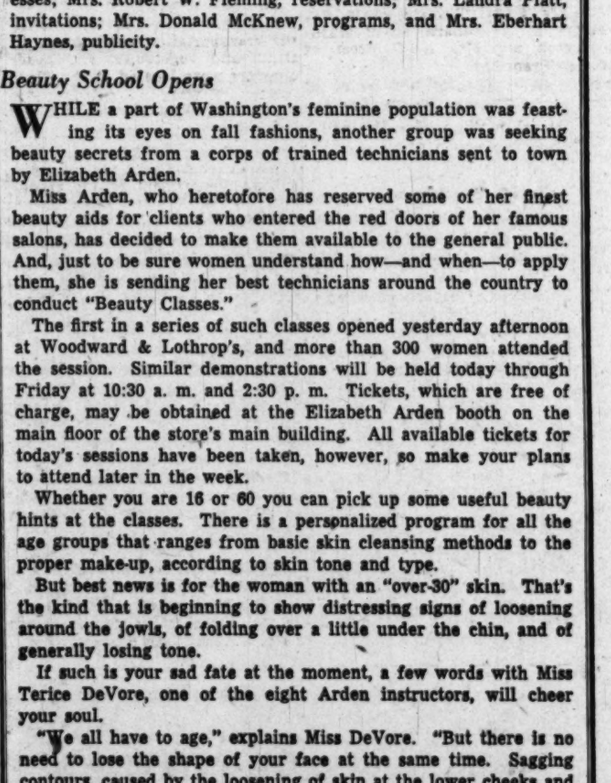
Whether you are 16 or 60 you can pick up some useful beauty hints at the classes. There is a personalized program for all the age groups that ranges from basic skin cleansing methods to the proper make-up, according to skin tone and type.

But best news is for the woman with an "over-30" skin. That's the kind that is beginning to show distressing signs of loosening around the jowls, of folding over a little under the chin, and of generally losing tone.

If such is your sad fate at the moment, a few words with Miss Terice DeVore, one of the eight Arden instructors, will cheer your soul.

"We all have to age," explains Miss DeVore. "But there is no need to lose the shape of your face at the same time. Sagging contours, caused by the loosening of skin at the lower cheeks and chin can be remedied, provided a woman is willing to work at it."

Proper massage, plus lubrication and the application of a skin tightening lotion will do the trick over a period of time, according to Miss DeVore, who has seen the system work time and again in her 20 years experience as a beauty instructor.



"STUDENTS" at the Elizabeth Arden beauty classes at Woodward & Lothrop's, receive lessons in skin care and make-up from a trained instructor. The class began yesterday, continues all week

Jean Van Evera Becomes Bride

Miss Jean Van Evera and John Markle, 2d, of Haverford, Pa., were married Saturday at the home of the bride's parents in Kansas City, Mo. The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Van Evera, was attended by her sister, Mrs. Eldridge Hirst Lovelace. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. R. Park Johnson.

Mrs. Markle who has been until recently a resident of Washington, is the author of "How to Be Happy While Single" which was published last spring. A graduate of the Principia School and Northwestern University, she was a staff writer for the Kansas City Star for six years. During the war she was a staff writer for the American Red Cross in San Francisco. She is a member of the Women's National Press Club, the American Newspaper Woman's Club and Theta Sigma Phi, national honorary fraternity for women journalists.

Mr. Markle, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Alvan Markle of Hazelton, Pa., is a graduate of the Hill School and Yale University. General traffic manager for the Bell Telephone Co. of Pennsylvania, he is a member of the Philadelphia Country Club, the Union League Club and the Yale Club of New York.

After October 10, Mr. and Mrs. Markle will make their home in Haverford.

Three Win Modeling Scholarships

Three winners of the fall fashion modeling contest were chosen Saturday. They will receive scholarships to Southeastern University's School of Fashion Modeling.

They are Mrs. Catherine H. Taylor, Indian Head, Md., who won in the gray-haired matron class; Miss Marlene Means of Washington—a finalist in the recent Miss Washington contest—who won in the junior miss class; and Miss Helen Biren of Arlington, Va., who won the award in the teen-age classification.

The contest, sponsored by Lansburgh's, was held in the Pall Mall Room of the Raleigh Hotel.

Judges who selected the three winners from 45 contestants were fashion editors of local newspapers and five professional models: Julie Mehlman, Mary Dorothy Pelicano, Virginia Patterson, Marjorie Lang and Marjabelle Young.

Previous winners include Miss Sally Gardiner who was recently chosen to pose for United States Marine Corps recruiting posters.

Idealistic Symbol

Woman for President? Certainly—and Why Not A Feminine Justice Too!

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

IN THE SEPTEMBER 27 issue of Look Magazine, James Vincent Sheean has come up with a new old idea which should provide dinner table chitchat to fill the gap left by the recent monetary goings on. Jimmy, whose interest in the opposite sex heretofore has been strictly earthbound, is now boosting the ladies onto a lofty pedestal and advocating the election of a feminine President of the United States.

He claims, in considerable and plausible detail, that a woman President would prove America's great love for peace.

This is how the Sheean mentality unravels his thesis: Right now we have everything—power, material prosperity—yet the stresses of our present kind of peace are almost like war, and they can become heavier or lighter depending on what we do. Since about 90 percent of the globe's population is barely literate, our material help, such as the Marshall Plan, is often misinterpreted and twisted by Communist propaganda.

The only way to penetrate all varieties of iron curtains, Mr. Sheean believes, is to have our country represented by a symbol everyone will understand—a symbol which will personify American idealism and love of peace. The chief symbol appealing to universal imagination is the mother. In Russia, according to Sheean, the Mom symbol is particularly potent. He helps prove this point by a neat Russky proverb—"a man may change his wife, his house, his furniture, or even his children. The one thing no man can ever change in life is his mother."

WITH THE SOVIET happily set to appreciate and possibly cooperate with a female United States President, Jimmy takes up the practical political side, stating a woman candidate for high office would override party barriers, gaining both feminine and labor votes sufficient to swing the election. He has no particular candidate in mind and sole suggestion is that a woman capable of undertaking this struggle could not be a professional politician, at least, he qualifies, not of the hardbitten variety.

Mr. Sheean concludes that though his idea is not at the moment practically possible, it is the one symbolic act that would correctly represent the people of the United States during the immediate future.

Conditioned by those enticing advertisements which admonish "never underestimate the power of a woman," and show in precise percentages that women are interested in practically everything, we consider Mr. Sheean's idea far from impossible.

Searching for a woman candidate though is another matter. The only woman of sufficient experience, intelligence, and ability to be president, in our opinion, is a foreigner. She's Madame Pandit, the Ambasssador from India.

But while we are searching for a symbolic representative, why not start off with filling a few lower rungs. The Supreme Court would be far more influential, if a woman were included, and how about a feminine Secretary of Commerce? It's time India Edwards got to work again.

The Most Rev. and Right Honorable Cyril Foster Garbett, Archbishop of York, may set a new party fashion in the Nation's Capital. He refuses to stand still long hours in a receiving line. Between handshakes he goes on a sprightly stroll or mingles with the guests.

His penchant for walking and his aversion to just standing came out yesterday when he appeared as guest of honor at a tea in the Bishop's Garden. Hosts at the colorful outdoor event were the Very Rev. John W. Suter, Dean of Washington Cathedral, and members of the Cathedral Chapter.

The British Ambassador, Sir Oliver Shewell Franks and Lady Franks dashed from their own party at the Embassy to receive with the Primate of England and Metropolitan area. Earlier they honored Lord Tedder, Air Chief Marshal, at a tea.

Receiving with the English prelate, in addition to Sir Oliver and Lady Franks, was Dean Suter and his daughter, Mrs. Armistead Rood.

Some 500 members of residential society and church circles, turned out to meet the blue-eyed, silver-haired Archbishop of York. Today the high ranking British churchman will see President Harry S. Truman. On Wednesday he will depart for Salt Lake City where he will deliver an address in the Mormon Tabernacle. When he arrives in San Francisco next week to attend the fifty-sixth general convention of the Episcopal Church, he will be greeted by the Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, and Mrs. Dun.

Serving as hostesses and taking turns at the tea table were Mrs. John Clifford Folger, Mrs. Lloyd Wilson, Mrs. James Barnes, Mrs. Montgomery Blair, Miss Carolyn Nash, Mrs. Henry Porter, Mrs. Spencer Love, Mrs. Robert V. Fleming, Mrs. E. R. Finkenstaedt, Mrs. Clarence Aspinwall and Mrs. David E. Finley.

Mrs. Morris Cafritz, contender for the crown of the city's No. 1 hostess, was there, chatting with friends after a brief stay in Europe.

'Fight Crime, Cure Criminal' Is Judge Cockrill's Motto

By Genevieve Reynolds and Nicha Soure

"WHAT MAKES a criminal tick? Why did he act as he did?" Miss Edith Cockrill first became absorbed in this problem while working in her father's office when he served as clerk of court in Tennessee.

Now Miss Cockrill is a D. C. Juvenile Court judge, and doubly interested in knowing what prompted the offender to commit the offense.

According to Judge Cockrill, the purpose of the Juvenile Court is "to fight crime and cure the criminal. A person who commits a crime should be restored to society rather than ostracized," she told members of the Democratic Women's National Council in an informal talk last night.

To relax after a strenuous day in Court, Judge Cockrill turns to colored photography and handicrafts. Out of plastics she molds bookends, candleholders. Or perhaps while relaxing, she will carve a rosebud leaf out of a cake of soap. Sometimes she makes wooden salad bowls, trays, or a spoon.

Strictly a hobby, she says the handicrafts are for her own amusement. "Sometimes, I don't use them all," she laughs. "And they aren't perfect enough to give away."

Mary Haworth's Mail

Irishman Lately Arrived From Emerald Isle Is Squiring Working Girl Who Really Enjoys His Company, But His Manners Embarrass Her

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For the last month I have been going with a man, around 38 or 40, who comes from Ireland. He has been here since the middle of May, working for a wealthy family, and before that he lived in Canada for two years.

Joe smokes, but uses no bad language, at least not in my presence, and he is quite a good conversationalist, although I don't think he has had much schooling. I am just an ordinary working girl, my parents are working people still earning their living, and I've worked for everything I've had, except my schooling.

Now for the problem: I really do enjoy Joe's company, except for certain crudities of manner on his part which embarrass me. In entering or leaving a restaurant or movie, he opens the door and passes through first, letting me follow and manage the door for myself. After the movies, he doesn't even wait for me to reach the aisle before he goes out. He never opens a car door for me, but unlocks the car, gets in and I follow.

Should She Venture Reproving Comment?

I DON'T expect a boy friend to wait on me hand and foot when we are together, but I do like little courtesies shown me in public, and what woman doesn't? After all, American women are brought up to expect them; and as Joe is more or less new in this country, why can't he see how others do?

Worst of all, when we eat out, he fails for some reason to use the napkin for its intended purpose, and instead uses his handkerchief, which sometimes is slightly soiled. To me this is most embarrassing, but having known him only a month I hesitate to make corrective suggestions.

Somehow I feel that in Ireland the people don't make a practice of letting the ladies go first; but the matter of the napkin I don't understand; and I don't know whether Joe would take offense or be glad if I mentioned these things. Your advice will be much appreciated.

L. B.

He Seems Negligent Rather Than Ignorant

DEAR L. B.: Certainly Joe has traveled enough to be aware of the social amenities you admire, the more especially if he is intelligent (as his clever tongue suggests) and employed by a wealthy household, where he has a certain amount of "gentlemanly" and "ladylike" behavior under observation, we may presume.

Then why his persistence in those crudities you deplore? Probably because he was reared in a somewhat primitive mold, has had very little consecutive "woman-influence" in his life in grown-up years, and has always "got by" well enough, he feels, without making any special effort to refine his manners, since voyaging into the larger world.

In other words, his semi-savage neglect of the customary niceties of squiring a dame, American style, is probably due to negligence rather than ignorance nowadays. Doubtless the trend was started by early conditioning, and became perennially more entrenched as a result of leading a "lone wolf" private life.

Girl's Entitled to Air Grievance

IN GENERAL both men and women need to be continually associated in close relationship, in an intimate atmosphere of loving-kindness, in order to assimilate (as second nature) the spirit and practice of courteous gestures. The person of either sex who lives alone tends to plunge ahead without indicating deference to another's pace or comfort; and tends also to develop lax table manners,—and I reckon Joe is a case in point.

For advice: Since you enjoy Joe's company but are distressed by his boners, it seems good common sense to be frank with him about your feelings, pro and con. In dealing with any beau whose actions offend, it is your business to indicate the brand of behavior more pleasing to you; and if the man is basically cooperative, friendly and respectful, a "hint to the wise" should bring improvement, even though he may feel some passing chagrin at being corrected.

Friendship More Precious Than Flowers

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Children must learn, at home, to respect the property of others. They have to be taught and shown an example of respect for what belongs to others.

But, when it is not a case of destructiveness, which no one upholds, but merely of allowing neighbor's children to step on one's grass or smell one's flowers or even play a bit in one's yard, it seems to me (both in practice and theory) that their friendship is more precious than grass blades or even flowers.

Mrs. G. W. W. disagrees with me violently. "People that have raised their own children, or have none, have a right to enjoy their own yards without the neighbor's children making it a playground. I should think any parents with intelligence would want to teach their children respect for other people's property."

Mrs. G. S. C. writes, "I sympathize with the woman who wants a plot of her own without the neighbor's children running over it. I like children, but I like the privacy of my own home. Children, now-a-days, have no respect for property, everything is supposed to be for them. I don't wonder there is so much juvenile delinquency. What I object to is that neighbors let their children run over my yard and won't let them do the same on theirs.

"Why do we pay taxes for fine schools and playgrounds and then when we want privacy have to spend more money for fences? Children care no more for a neighbor who gives them candy and cookies, except that they call the one who doesn't, an old crank."

These are very positive statements which I doubt could be proven. There has never been a time, past or present, when children did not think the far fields were greener and want to roam over them—whether this be your yard or mine.

Of course, parents must teach their children not to trespass if neighbors object and to preserve property. My contention is that if friendly children wander into a yard and play it would not seem to be a criminal affair or one deserving of so much heat. Not if one likes children.

Tips for Cookies

To fill a cookie jar for after-school snacking for youngsters, choose cookies with dried fruit, molasses, rolled oats or other cereals, so that boys and girls get the excellent nutrients in these foods.

Cookies that are being sent to boys and girls at school should be wrapped separately in waxed paper or aluminum foil.

Eat Home Meals, Girls; Skip the In-Betweens

By Ida Jean Kain

(This is the second of 12 articles on teen-age slimming)

IT'S the blushing truth . . . most teenagers prefer to eat heartily between meals and skip the good wholesome food their mothers serve at meals. They can't understand why they keep adding padding, they eat very small meals—6 or 7 a day.

Let's take a horrible example through a typical day. Our junior Miss Muncher skips breakfast. After all, a girl has to give some thought to her figure. Besides it saves time and she's not hungry in the morning anyway. Grabbing a doughnut or a piece of cake, she's off to school.

But in the middle of the morning she feels the need of a candy bar and maybe a few cookies, just to tide her over. That takes the edge off her appetite, so she eats sparingly at lunch—perhaps a hot dog and a coke, topped off with a sweet.

IDA JEAN KAIN

After school she is hungry and hurries to the drug store for a strawberry soda or a banana split, depending on her allowance balance. The calorie count depends on how sweetly our model smiles at the boy behind the counter. Then she may debate whether to spend her last nickel on peanuts or a candy bar . . . after all, she reasons, she ate practically no lunch.

Naturally at dinner time our chubby teenager gets by with as few vegetables as her mother will allow. Disgruntled at being urged, she groans, "Potatoes! Really, mother, how could you—they're so fattening!" She drinks milk under protest but doesn't skip dessert.

With such poor food habits our example is malnourished, overweight to the contrary.

Surprisingly enough, the too-thin gal is apt to have somewhat the same pattern of eating. She can't eat breakfast and doesn't have an appetite for good, wholesome food. With a highly nervous digestive system she is less able to assimilate food, so she is malnourished and under weight. Her undernutrition makes for restlessness and she burns calories extravagantly, which sets up a vicious circle.

The solution? Our chubby teen should pin herself down to three good meals a day, comprised largely of the protective foods to be listed tomorrow. Our thin model should likewise eat three good meals a day with a choice of nourishing food. Snacks? Only after school, and then not sweets for either the fat or the thin.

Here's the diet for overweight teen-age girls:

Household Hints

To clean the inside of your refrigerator, sprinkle a little baking soda on a clean damp cloth, and rub over the surface.

It's best to use a deep bowl with straight sides in whipping a small amount of cream just as fast as you can—it shouldn't take more than a few minutes to whip a cup of cream.

Fashion Chatter

Are you one of the millions who complain bitterly about the discomfort of screw and clip earrings? Or are you an unlucky soul with ear lobes so small that you can't wear earrings at all? In either event, we bring you good tidings . . . It's called "Wingback," and it has a nifty contrivance that rests on your ear and stays there. No aches, no pains—and it won't fall off! The design is so simple and so good that you wonder why no one ever thought of it before. Below is one of Coro's collection of earrings featuring Wingbacks. This style is $3.60 a pair including Federal tax.—Kay Wister, Fashion Ed.

How To Put On Wingback Earrings

1. Pick up left earring in right hand with index finger on top of the wings.

2. Hold left ear lobe firmly with left thumb and forefinger. Slide the earring upward, close to your cheek.

3. Wire goes to ear; wings fit into curve above lobe. Reverse directions for the right earring.

Cooking Cues

For a vegetable plate supper serve corn pudding, broiled tomatoes, spinach vinaigrette, and snap beans or broccoli. A supper menu such as this usually calls for a hearty dessert such as gingerbread and applesauce.

Finely chopped onion and green pepper or pimento are delicious sauteed in a little fat and added to eggs that are to be scrambled; use for a sandwich filling if you like.

Don't be afraid to investigate a piece of meat, to find out where the bones are, before trying to carve it. A little advance exploration of this kind will help you slice the meat to perfection.

If you want to establish good eating habits make sure that you have a well-balanced lunch every day. Soup made with milk, sandwiches of meat or fish, a vegetable or a salad, and a fruit dessert makes one of the most nutritious midday meals.

Did you ever unmold an attractive gelatin salad or dessert only to find it had landed in the northeast section of the plate instead of the center? Try pouring a tiny amount of cold water over the dish and then shake off as much as possible. Then unmold the salad and, if it fails to make the center, it is an easy matter to slide it right over where it belongs, as it will slip readily on the wet surface.

Bring any leftover preserves and jellies from last year to the front of the preserve closet shelf and start on these before you use the fresh things of this year's preserving. Then you will not have any spoilage.

Use Energetic Fall Weather For Doing That Homework

By Ann Pringle

Fall is the time to do some of that homework the hot weather interfered with. If you feel energetic—and this is the season for it—don't, for Heaven's sake, let the mood pass. It may be months before the moment comes again, and until then those drawers will go unsorted, those closets unemptied and those curtains unmade.

Perhaps you have a hobby you've neglected because there was no proper place to pursue it. Fall is the time to do something about it. A very acceptable darkroom, for example, can be fixed up in a large closet, or in one of those tiny maid's rooms that often go unused in servantless apartments. You can build a work table, hang books and shelves on the wall for equipment, screen out the light and work like a professional photographer in your own home.

Sometimes an unused wall space between windows, or an odd corner in a hallway can be put to good use with some carpentry or home-built cabinets and shelves. You might put your sewing machine there, and build around it storage space for thread, needles, fabrics, patterns and all the necessary sewing equipment. Be sure to light it well. A strip of fluorescent lighting set in a trough over the sewing machine will look attractive and save your eyes.

Perhaps, like me, you'd rather read a book than make a thousand dresses or a thousand metal ashtrays. This can be made a more comfortable pastime, too. Maybe you need more bookshelves, a new armchair or a new lamp. It's amazing the number of readers I know who haven't a really comfortable reading spot in their whole home.

There are many other small changes you can make to enjoy your hobby more. You can clear out shelves for stamp albums, build a pull-up work table in the kitchen for messy work or even install some little glass hanging shelves for your plants. It only takes a bit of energy, and the results are worth it.

How to Care for Irish Linen

I am anxious to learn the correct way to launder, iron (including how to fold), and store table and banquet cloths of Irish linen (Pointe Venice and embroidered types)? M. L. S.

To wash delicate and exquisite table cloths, use mild soap or a soapless detergent and lukewarm water. Wash by hand or, in the case of large cloths, not more than three minutes in an electric washing machine. Placing the cloth in a large pillow case before putting it into the machine to wash is gentler on delicate fabrics than allowing them to wash in the machine unprotected. When clean, rinse thoroughly and remove water without twisting. A machine wringer is easier on fabrics than hand wringing because with hand wringing there is always the temptation to twist as one wrings.

Hang to dry, gently pulling the edges to straighten. In the case of lace, it would be wise to hang on two adjacent lines to lessen the pull and avoid stretching.

When dry, sprinkle linen and embroidered cloths evenly, roll tightly, and let stand until the moisture is evenly distributed.

Iron linen and embroidered cloths first on the wrong side with some padding under the cloth. This will nicely bring out the embroidery and weave in the cloth. Do not iron until completely dry on the wrong side, but turn over to the right side and iron again—this time ironing until dry. When folding do not press in creases except the lengthwise ones. Lace cloths are best if allowed to almost dry and then are pressed immediately until dry on the wrong side.

All table cloths should be first folded down the middle lengthwise, then folded once more into quarters lengthwise. The remaining strip is folded together crosswise in the middle twice or three times depending upon the length of the cloth.

If the cloths are not to be used frequently is would be wise to place white tissue paper between the last folds to prevent formation of heavy creases and then wrap each cloth well in tissue to keep clean.

We now live in a country home, pine-paneled, with several picture windows. I think this kind of house usually calls for braided rugs, chintz curtains, etc. But we have really lovely things from Asia—rugs, silk hanging draperies, and so on. Could you make any suggestions on how I could combine these two radically different types of decoration? M. L. S.

Pine paneling should not be associated only with the Early American period when the modest circumstances of the early settlers prevented the use of fine fabrics and other luxury furnishings. It is true that the furniture and furnishings of the Early Colonial period were often so primitive that the period came to be known as "kitchen" Colonial.

The succeeding period, however, the Eighteenth Century Colonial, was a period where luxury in furniture styles and fabrics prevailed. Pine paneling was used so extensively during this period that it is considered a distinguishing characteristic of the period. In authentic Eighteenth Century decorated homes today one sees paneling used with Oriental rugs, fine furniture such as Chippendale, Sheraton and Duncan Phyfe, and luxury fabrics.

If you wish to go into the subject more completely, I suggest you see House and Garden's "Complete Guide to Interior Decorations" edited by Richardson Wright (pub. by Simon & Schuster, N. Y.) In addition to a discussion of the characteristics of the period many illustrative pictures are included.

I am contemplating a plane trip and understand liquids (perfume, ink, etc.) leak at high altitudes. Will you please explain in your column how this leakage, if it is true, can be overcome? MRS. R. A.

Liquids are drawn out of bottles and fountain pens at high altitudes because of the lessening of the atmospheric pressure. The more air that is in the bottle or pen, the greater is the chance of the liquid being drawn out. Because of this, the air lines suggest that you remove ink from your pen and do not attempt to carry bottled liquids.

Please advise me how to remove stains caused by smoked salmon (grease) from a gray cotton dress. I have tried washing with cold water, hot water and soap, and carbon tetrachloride. The stains are as big as ever and have a fishy odor.

Could you also tell me please how to remove spots from a sterling silver dish? Silver polish doesn't help. I believe the spots were caused by salt. VERA

Moisten cornstarch with carbon tetrachloride and rub it into the stain. Let stand for 30 minutes or so to absorb oil from fibers and wash in soap and water. Repeat if all the stain and odor is not removed the first time.

Since the spots from your silver cannot be removed by hand rubbing, I'm afraid the only solution is to take the dish to one of the firms listed under "Platers" in the yellow pages of the telephone book which does repairing. These firms have equipment for mechanical buffing which will usually remove stubborn stains.

Can you tell me whether or not I can successfully dye a fiber rug? I was thinking of sponging it with hot dye in two related colors so that a mottled effect would be retained and even application would be no object. MRS. B. R.

An easier way to change the color is to paint it. Also, because the paint better seals the fiber against absorption of moisture and soil, a painted rug would be easier to keep clean than a dyed one would be.

To paint the rug, first remove all dust by sweeping or using a vacuum sweeper, and lay it flat on several thicknesses of newspaper. Paint with an awning paint or a good grade of floor paint thinned with turpentine—one part turpentine to four parts of paint. Use a cheap brush to apply the paint so it can be well worked into the fibers. Allow to dry thoroughly before using.

I have been given a salad set of a bowl and four dishes. They are made of a light-colored wood, and apparently shellacked. Foolishly, I placed two of the bowls against the edge of the drain after I had washed them, and left them standing there all day. When I returned in the evening, I found that evidently the water had drained off and that the edges of the bowls had been resting in the drained-off water all day, causing the coating of shellac, or whatever it is, to crack and peel. Is there any way I can refinish these bowls? MRS. W. P. J.

You can refinish the bowls by applying a penetrating type of sealer to the bowls. One type is applied with a brush and the surface is wiped almost immediately while wet with a cloth to completely remove the sealer from the surface. Another product of this type is applied, allowed to dry and the surface rubbed with steel wool. These finishes can be purchased at well-stocked paint stores.

Before these penetrating seals are applied, the bowl should be thoroughly sanded over the entire surface to remove the loose finish and smooth the surface.

Try Raisin Scones for Breakfast

You'll have no trouble in getting your family to eat a better breakfast if you tempt them with such goodies as "Raisin Crumb Scones" occasionally.

They are a wonderful way of using dry bread because they take half bread crumbs and half flour for thickening. Make them with seedless raisins if you don't have any golden ones on hand.

Raisin Crumb Scones

- ¾ cup golden raisins
- 1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
- 2 tablespoons granulated sugar
- 4 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup fine dry bread crumbs
- 1 egg
- ¼ cup shortening
- ½ cup milk
- Granulated sugar for tops

Rinse raisins and drain. Sift together flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Blend in crumbs and shortening. Add raisins. Beat egg lightly, add milk and stir into dry mixture. Pat one third of dough at a time into circle about 4 inches in diameter. Cut in quarters. Dust tops of wedges lightly with sugar, and place on greased baking sheet. Bake in very hot oven (450 degrees F.) 12 to 15 minutes. Serve hot. This recipe makes 12 scones.

G. W. Drama Dept. Already Buzzing

By Richard L. Coe

PEOPLE: Though registration doesn't start till next week, the speech department at George Washington University already is churning . . . Prof. L. Poe Leggette, head of the department, now has a staff of 10 for his team and this year the university will be offering an M. A. in dramatic art . . . It's quite a cry from the spontaneous combustion of the old Cue and Curtain Club, about as far as that snappy new Student Union lunch spot is from sandwiches at a distance, as of yore . . . This year the drama group will be presenting four plays, and casting for them will get started that first registration day, Wednesday, the twenty-eighth . . . The innards of Lisner are alive with preschool activity and general planning . . . New to the department this year is William Vorenberg, who'll probably direct the second play of the series . . . This B. A. from the University of Mexico, M. A. from Stanford, has been on the staff of both . . He's also worked in New York for Joe Fields, USO, Equity Library Productions and at the Greenwich Mews Playhouse . . . An affable North Carolinian without a Tarheel accent, Professor Leggette has high hopes for his team this year . . . His department's aim is to create leaders for community theater groups across the country, a laudable, logical idea.

ANOTHER nonprofessional group is getting up steam . . . The Mount Vernon Players, under their new director, Donald W. Pimm, already have cast their first offering . . . This will be Sheridan's comedy, "The Rivals." . . . In the cast will be: Leon Norris, Richard Miller, Dorothy Ohliger, Theresa Schwarz, Nancy Alexander, Margurite Minsky, Terry Gallegos, Frank Savage, Bert Bram, Lenny Saver, Bill Cain and Herb Harvey . . . This will open its 15-night run October 20 . . . Second offering of this unique group — church-sponsored, nonsectarian—will be "Oedipus Rex;" the Sophocles drama will open December 1 . . . This means quite a rugged schedule for Director Pimm, but he seems to have it all clearly worked out.

RADIO LISTENERS will have an added kick out of the Olney's production of "The Man Who Came to Dinner" . . . The jittery lady who brings Moss Hart that calves foot jelly early in the first act will be WTOP's engaging Hazel Markel . . . And the looney lady of the final act who joggles Hero Hart's memory will be played by Evelyn Freyman, vice president, once again, of the American Federation of Radio Artists, and coproducer of Olney.

CLIPPINGS are beginning to arrive about the Howard University Players' reception in Oslo . . . Before they even got a chance to act, they were feted at a reception attended by the crown prince and crown princess and the diplomatic Corps . . . The first two reviews express close to surprise than an amateur group can do so well by Norway's classic dramatist, Ibsen. . . . The reviews I've had made it clear that this is not to be compared with Oslo's National Theater productions of "The Wild Duck," but that the Howard players "warrant deepest admiration, successful beyond all expectations." . . . "Students Receive Hearty Ovation," headlines the Arbeiderblat.

LAST NIGHT brought the opening of a two-week run for Gadsby's Tavern's annual revival in Alexandria . . . The only manuscript of this 1749 play by Dr. Benjamin Hoadley known to be in this country is at the Folger Library, which permitted the Alexandria Litle Theater people to copy it. . . . Brewery to Build Big Newark Plant

St. Louis, Sept. 19 (AP).—Anheuser-Busch, Inc., announced today it will start building a new 20 million dollar brewery at Newark, N. J., immediately. It is expected to be in operation within little more than a year," said August A. Busch, jr., president.

Two Servants Win Right to Vacation Pay

Two domestic servants yesterday in Municipal Court won their right to two weeks' vacation pay under an oral contract with the employer.

That the servants resigned from their job did not cause them to relinquish vacation rights earned before the resignation became effective, Judge George D. Neilson ruled.

The decision meant that $50, the equivalent of a week's pay, is to go to Joseph and Mary Tillman, 762 Gresham pl. nw. Their former employer, loser in the suit, was George Yandes Wheeler 2d of 2510 Foxhall rd. nw.

Tillman, a chauffeur, and his wife, a maid, stated that in 1947, when they were hired, they were assured that they would get two weeks vacation with pay yearly, and that in the summer of 1948, they received it.

This year, they resigned, Judge Neilson found, and were given only the equivalent of one-week's pay.

The employer contented that there was no definite amount of vacation promised, Neilson said.

The jurist, however, said that the promise of two-weeks vacation was partly proven by the fact that the Tillmans received it in 1948. He decided that the servants resigned after differences had arisen. The resignations did not occur until after a year elapsed since the Tillmans had received their last annual leave, Neilson said.

U. S. Tax Liens Filed Against 17 in District

Turf and Grid Club Inc., 1337 14th st. nw., an after-hours "bottle club," was among 17 firms and individuals against whom Federal tax lien notices were filed in District Court yesterday.

The notice against the club cited income taxes of $1287.12 for the period March, 1948, to March, 1949. Club officials were not available for comment.

Six more of the remaining liens concerned tax liens in excess of $1000. They involved:

Ligo Development Corp., real estate construction, 1429 L st nw., income taxes March, 1948 to March, 1949, $6944.11. A spokesman for the corporation said "there is money in the treasury to pay the tax. A check has been drawn for the amount. It was a mere oversight."

Fred Panell, 926 O st. nw., income tax, 1943 to 1946, $10,099.67; Abraham Rose, 1101 Vermont ave. nw., income tax for 1948, $3234.50; Joseph E. Rose and J. E. Rose, 1101 Vermont ave. nw., income tax for 1948, $2558.88; Oliver B. and Roberta C. Cassell, 1311 Hamlin st. ne., income tax for 1948, $1819.81; and Joseph R. and Virginia I. Moore, 72 T st. nw., income tax for 1946, $1464.87.

None of the persons involved in those cases were available for comment.

Export-Import Bank Has $24,100,000 Net

The Export-Import Bank advised Congress yesterday that it has made a $24,100,000 profit on operations during the first half of 1949.

The total increased its net earnings for the fiscal year ending June 30 to 47 million dollars.

The board said its total earned surplus during the past 15 years amounts to $154,600,000 and has been set aside for "future contingencies."

D. C. Insurance Exceeds That Of 20 States

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington is a life-insurance minded area.

Latest figures show that this city has $1,817,000,000 in life policies outstanding, more than the total in any of 20 States.

Based on an estimated population of 837,000 here, this means there was $2170 insurance per capita.

Excluding group contracts, there were 1,328,720 life policies outstanding here, or about 1.6 policies for every man, woman and child in this city.

The figures as of January 1 this year, were reported yesterday by the Institute of Life Insurance.

In a breakdown of types of insurance, the institute reported these figures for the District of Columbia: 417,900 ordinary policies for $1,092,000,000; 910,400 industrial policies for $247,000,000, and 420 group contracts for $477,800,000.

If the group contracts were divided into the number of individual holders, the per capita number of policies probably would be more than two per person here.

In the nearby States, Virginia showed 1,628,400 life policies and 820 group contracts for an aggregate of $3,331,200,000; Maryland displayed 1,674,600 holders and 660 group contracts for a total of $3,363,100,000.

ENTERPRISE: The traditional "tombstone" approach to advertising is being abandoned by investment bankers. This was emphasized in connection with distribution yesterday of a booklet reproducing ads of investment houses this year. The pamphlet, prepared by the Public Education Committee of the Investment Bankers Association, is aimed at improving the effectiveness of investment advertising. It's worth close study by local houses.

MOTOR FIRM SOLD: Loving Motors of Washington has been sold to the Packard Federal Corp., it was learned yesterday. New York Cotton

New York, Sept. 19 (AP).—Cotton futures were easy today under moderate pressure of commission house and New Orleans selling. Final levels were 50 to 70 cents a bale under the previous close. The devaluation of the pound sterling accounted for an initial flurry of liquidation and traders pondered the effect of this step on United States exports of raw cotton and textile. The general view among dealers was that the currency move will not have much immediate influence on the cotton situation. Most of the cotton exports are being financed through ECA dollars and other Government programs. Dealers noted that if exports are curbed it will simply mean that more cotton will move into Government hands while prices remain supported at high levels by the Government loan.

Let Wage Earners Invest in Stocks, C. of C. Head Says

Chicago, Sept. 19 (AP).—Herman W. Steinkraus, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, said today he thinks there's a vast securities market as yet hardly tapped among the wage and salary earners of moderate means.

The Government's success in the sale of E series bonds, he said "is proof of the power of the people to buy enormous sums of such gilt-edged investments."

Steinkraus addressed the opening session of the annual meeting of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America.

The group's thirty-sixth annual convention elected R. O. Deming, jr., of Oswego, Kans., president of the association to succeed Aksel Nielsen of Denver.

Sen. Byrd Rated World's No. 1 Apple Grower; 2 Sons Aid Him

MR. AND MRS. CARL COSTELLO PICK THE RIPE FRUIT

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Winchester, Va., Sept. 19.—If there is anything to the adage that "an apple a day keept the doctor away" Senator Harry Flood Byrd (D., Va.) is the American medical profession's greatest menace.

For Byrd raises more apples than any other person in the world. He also is famous for his apple sauce—the kind made from apples, sugar and water. His machines at the Byrd Berryville cannery turn out 200 cans a minute, labeled and boxed, ready for shipment.

Last year Byrd's 4000 acres of orchards produced a million bushels of apples. This year they will give out with between 750,000 and a million.

Figuring about 145 to 155 apples to a bushel, Byrd raises an apple a year for just about every man, woman and child in the United States.

Once the Senator also raised peaches, but in the last three years has turned entirely to apples.

On his vast acreage—about two thirds of it around Berryville and Winchester, Va., and one-third at Charles Town, W. Va., about 10 miles away—he raises 22 commercial varieties, but specializes in six.

These six are known as "color sports"—highly tinted types of old varieties—the color making them unusually attractive. They are the Yorking, developed from the better known York; the Red Delicious, the Golden Delicious, the Rome Beauty, the Stayman Winesap and the Old Winesap.

He raises Jonathan, Lowry, Mothers and Pippin eating apples. Some types are for both eating and cooking, like the Grimes Golden, the Golden Delicious, the Black Twig and the Winesap.

Some are especially good for pies, such as the York and the Stayman. And some are only for cooking: the Romes, the Ben Davis, the Gano and the Wealthy.

Byrd started in the apple business 43 years ago, when he was 19 years old. From a small orchard that he leased, he has expanded his operations to include two large packing and canning plants—at Berryville and Charles Town. Besides selling 300,000 boxes of apples, this year the Byrd company will can 360,000 cases of 24, 20-ounce cans of apple sauce. It will put up thousands of jars of jellies. The plant puts up five kinds of jellies, all with an apple base. Byrd also sells sweet cider and apple concentrate, and, in a few years, hopes to spread into other apple products.

His big canneries are only about 3 years old—in fact, just now nearing full production. They are designed to process about 60 per cent of the Byrd apples. This permits the Senator to box only the very best, to put out to the trade what he chooses to call "top, fancy fresh fruit."

As with many other industries, the war played havoc with Byrd's apple business. In the so-called peaceful days of the 1930s, 95 to 96 per cent of the huge Byrd crop went for export—to Great

121 Alcoholics Aided in 2 Years By Arlington Mental Clinic

By Judith F. Spivak
Post Reporter

The Arlington Health Department's Alcoholic Clinic, established in July, 1947, has offered help through psychotherapy for more than two years to compulsive drinkers.

Staffed by two psychiatrists, two public health nurses and a psychologist, the clinic is open—free—each Tuesday from 6 to 10 p. m., at 1800 N. Edison st., Arlington.

So far 121 alcoholics have crossed its threshold—few of them with any eagerness or hope. Skeptical, and often embarrassed, most clinic patients have come because of the persistent badgering of relatives or friends, because of threats of divorce, or through the recommendation of the county court judge.

Offers No Guarantees

The clinic offers no guarantees—no answer to alcoholism, says Dr. Robert Burnham, director of the Health Department's Guidance Center, of which the clinic is a part. Second clinic psychiatrist is Dr. Manson B. Pettit, member of St. Elizabeth's staff.

It does promise aid, backed by the knowledge that others have been, and are being, helped to conquer their problems by psychiatrists trained in the healing techniques of psychotherapy.

The clinic has had a few phenomenal successes among its patients, most spectacular of which was Mr. X.

Mr. X. was 45 when he walked in the clinic door a year and a half ago. He was a "court referral," with a history of several arrests for drunken abuse of his wife. His obsessive drinking stretched back over a period of 25 years.

Mr. X. had one interview at the clinic, gave up drinking, and has stayed "dry" since. He has his Government job back, and is able to care properly for his family. The court hasn't heard from him since, and he was able to give up clinic visits a year ago, after several months' treatment.

No Claim to "Miraculous"

The clinic lays no claim to a miraculous cure here. "He had simply reached a point where support of an understanding authoritative person was just what he needed to bolster his self-respect and his determination to make a new start," Dr. Burnham noted.

At the other extreme of clinic results are perhaps 35 per cent of referrals, who make one or two appointments, then abandon attempts to conquer their problem.

Statistics are deceiving where alcoholism is concerned, Dr. Burnham points out, for few victims are ever "cured." The clinic's goal of total abstinence may be achieved, but the alcoholic must ever be on guard against the danger of "slipping."

However, he estimates that about 10 per cent of clinic patients treated to date have achieved total abstinence. A majority of the rest, who have faithfully continued treatment, have cut down their drinking, their sprees are farther apart, and not so bad—and they have begun to put the shattered pieces of their lives together.

Why do people get to be alcoholics to begin with?

"That's a very controversial matter," said Dr. Burnham.

"One view holds alcoholics have a physical sensitivity to alcohol, or a tissue hunger of some sort. Another view regards it as a form of emotional illness, with alcohol being taken as a means of aiding the personality in its struggle with neurotic difficulties, or serving as a temporary escape from them.

Emotional Difficulties

"But whatever the 'cause' of alcoholism, every alcoholic has emotional difficulties and personality problems which interfere with his attempts to give up alcohol.

"Some of these are certainly the results of complications in his life, due to his alcoholism."

The disease of alcoholism has no respect for professions or padded bank accounts. It is as likely to attack the well-heeled lawyer as the ditch digger, the Army colonel or the buck private.

Alcoholics who go to the clinic may be as young as 25 or as old as 55. Their compulsive drinking history, often covering a period of 15 to 25 years, may reach back to the first drink they tasted. Or they may have slipped into compulsive drinking gradually, after a start as social drinkers. Still others may have become excessive drinkers after some crisis in their lives.

Mrs. H, 38, was an example of the social drinker who slips over the brink of alcoholism.

A gay party-goer the first 10 years of her married life, she felt tied to the house after the birth of her three children. A drink in the morning helped her through the dull routine of housework. Then it took several drinks. And finally she found it easier just to slip back in bed after breakfast.

Mrs. H reached the clinic through Arlington's domestic relations court, where her husband had gone for a divorce after giving their children to a relative for care.

Down To Monthly Slip

After three months of treatment, she had cut her drinking down to a monthly (on the average) slip, lasting less than a day.

Mrs. H isn't living happily ever after, just because of the clinic, but she has been given a chance to discover new values in her home and children, and is able to carry on a normal life.

Often the alcoholic is an emotionally dependent person trying to escape the fear that he has been unable to build a successful life on his own, acocrding to Dr. Burnham.

Johnny Y, who began drinking at 15, was a compulsive drinker by the age of 17 and finally came to the clinic for help at 28. His wife had threatened divorce if he didn't.

Johnny's parents were pretty young when he was born, liked parties, and weren't happy about the responsibilities that care for him entailed.

His earliest memories were trying to go to sleep on a bed in someone's house with a pile of coats around him, wondering if his mother and father were going to have a fight on the way home from the party.

Father Embittered

His father, a cab driver, was bitter about his lot in life, took it out on his son by belittling Johnny's achievements. His mother, a dependable woman, leaned on Johnny—told him all her troubles—instead of giving him the support he so badly needed.

Johnny began drinking in his teens because it gave him a "lift," helped him imagine he was successful, well liked, socially graceful, and sophisticated.

The self-understanding the clinic helped him achieve over a period of several months hasn't wrought any miracles. Johnny still has sprees, but they're shorter. And he's working steadily as a mechanic now. Both he and his wife, who has withdrawn her divorce threats, think he's much improved.

Treatment at the clinic may have to cover a period of several years before it works—or it may never succeed, Dr. Burnham explains.

But the clinic record, Dr. Burnham feels, is "distinctly better than we hoped for at the start."

He points to the large number of patients who come to it as a last resort, and to the fact that the heavy case load necessitates a short one-half hour treatment period a week.

For there can be no waiting list at the clinic. Alcoholics must be treated when they are ready for help. A delay can easily break down their shaky resolve to try to stop drinking, and a deferred appointment may lose a patient forever.

AA Members Cooperate

Atmosphere during clinic sessions is made as attractive as possible, for that same reason. Members of Alcoholics Anonymous, who cooperate actively with the clinic whenever asked, provide refreshments as well as a living example of conquered alcoholism.

The new patient first explains to the psychiatrist about his difficulties with alcohol, then furnishes a factual life history, to be used as a framework for treatment, to the public health nurse on duty.

Weekly interviews with the psychiatrist then begin, as the doctor probes the individual's problem in search of the most effective means of attack.

Sometimes common-sense advice about current living problems and their relation to his drinking does the trick. More often some understanding of current emotional difficulties is necessary. Sometimes the psychological problems must be traced back to their origins before real progress can be made.

There's no set routine—each individual is treated according to the doctor's judgment of his problem and emotional makeup.

Cost of running the clinic is approximately $6000 a year, Dr. Burnham estimated. One third is contributed by the county from tax funds, and the other two thirds comes from the State Department of Mental Hygiene and Hospitals. The State contribution includes Federal funds allocated to the State under the Mental Health Act of 1946.

Just what is the worth of this lengthy and frequently only partially successful treatment?

"It's one of the most valuable outside agencies available to the court," said County Court Judge Hugh Reid, one of the men behind the clinic's original foundation. At least 40 cases, nearly all of them domestic relations tangles, have been steeered to the clinic so far by Judge Reid.

The economic value of the clinic is "beyond question," Dr. Burnham adds to this appraisal.

He cites increased earning power of the rehabilitated alcoholic, the lessened jail and mental hospital costs, and the end of the drain on public assistance funds for the alcoholic's family.

"More important, the community gains a productive person, and loses a disruptive element," said the psychiatrist.

"The alcoholic is often a parent, and there is the benefit to the community of better upbringing of his children. And above all, there is the human value of gain in satisfactory living for the alcoholic himself."

THE INDIVIDUALITY, SETTING, CHARM AND LOCATION
all go to make this a most desirable home—3 gracious bedrooms and oversized tile bath upstairs. 1st floor vestibule entrance into spacious step-down living room with excellent fireplace. Formal dining room, very modern equipped kitchen including oversized refrigerator, automatic dishwasher, and many other extras. Breakfast room and ½ bath plus den, all at ground level. Large basement with rec. room and ½ bath on 1st flr.; must be seen to be appreciated. Open daily 2-6. Kindly ask about Nos. 8904 and 3905, Fulton R. Gordon, owner, DI. 5230. 1427 Eye st. nw.

WHITE OR COLORED—Either one who gets there first—gets the property. Both are negotiating. 500 acres, located 4 blocks beyond the District line, in Maryland, in the zone of the new South Capitol St. Bridge. I bought this property 30 years ago at $500 an acre. The bridge was then just talk. Now it's almost completed. The ground is cheaper today at $2,500 an acre then when I bought it for $500 an acre. This bridge will affect real estate values 40 miles beyond our property. This brings these 500 acres within 10 minutes' automobile time of downtown D. C. When I bought in Chevy Chase, D. C., 47 years ago, at an average of $2,000 an acre—one acre of it now where the Peoples Drug Store at Conn. ave. and Mc-Kinley is worth at the rate of a million dollars an acre, which is more than I paid for the 400 acres. This South Capitol st. property should do as well in increased value as the Chevy Chase property. If you have vision and faith and use it correctly you will find that Washington is the finest real estate town in the world. Fulton R. Gordon, jr., 1427 Eye st. nw. DI. 5230. Brokers, attention.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

'Those Nuisances'

In one family we know there are three children. "Buzz"—the eldest is a boy of about 7 years. Then come two girls—one barely a year and the other 4. Though "Buzz" is very nice with his younger sisters, they sometimes "get in his hair."

Usually the whole family does things together, but one day the parents decided that "Buzz" needed some time for himself. Arrangements were made to have the two younger children cared for while "Buzz" and his parents went for a ride by themselves. All through the trip, "Buzz" kept saying, "Aren't we glad those nuisances aren't along?" His parents "went along with the gag" and wholeheartedly agreed with him rather than attempting to be moralistic and saying something like, "We love our little sisters, don't we?"

As they parked in front of the house at the end of the ride, "Buzz" hurriedly opened the door of the car and said, "I can hardly wait to see those nuisances."

Like any child in his situation, "Buzz" had mixed feelings about the younger children. He was fond of them but quite naturally at times disliked them, too. To be given a chance to be special in the family for a short time and to be allowed to express some of his negative feelings was the best insurance for maintainirg a good relationship.

At the request of County Detective Earl J. Huber, Trial Magistrate Alan Bowie set the hearing for November 3.

Harding is charged with shooting Bernard (Yorkie) Del Negro, 37, of 2428 Tunlow rd. nw., an indicted gambler, near the club about 3:30 a. m., August 26. Huber said he needs more time for investigation.

Samuel Ochs, a Georgetown merchant, who was knifed at the same place the same night and also is charged with the shooting, will have an extradition hearing on the charges in the District on September 30.

"The Best Friend Your Car Ever Had"

Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—Chief Justice Fred Vinson, one of the most ardent ball fans in the country, found time to see the Cardinals play during the Midwest conferences of the chief justices of the States' courts. And as soon as the ball game was over, Umpire Beans Reardon asked to be introduced to Mr. Vinson . . . "I've always wanted to meet you, because we're in the same line of work," said the senior umpire of the National League to the Chief Justice of the United States. "We have much in common, Mr. Vinson. Both of us have to render a lot of opinions, at which everybody usually squawks —but our decisions are final."

Both President Truman and the Chief Justice will attend the World Series in St. Louis, if the Cardinals win. The President will have a special box erected for him and his friends . . . There'll be two "Samson and Delilah" presentations in New York this fall. One will be Cecil De Mille's film with Victor Mature, and the other a Metropolitan Opera revival of the opera, with Tenor Ramon Vinay singing the Samson role . . . The Encyclopedia Brittanica, a profitable venture, asked a famed New Yorker to write an article about civil liberties—but offered him a 2-cent-per-word rate.

When Robert E. Hannegan, the former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, started his law practice, he sought trial experience by taking a large number of justice of the peace cases involving sums under $750. The judge before whom these cases were tried was a plumber who held court in his second-floor tenement quarters. They became good friends, particularly since Hannegan kept him supplied with liquor obtained through prescriptions from a doctor-client. One day, when the justice of the peace called a case for trial and Hannegan stepped up as counsel, the J. P. hesitated, torn in conflict . . . "Kid, take a change of venue," he finally told the young lawyer, "I've been reached."

After Hannegan made his million-dollar capital gains deal in baseball, he retired to a Florida yacht. He had been operated on to ease his high blood pressure, and his doctors prescribed a salt-free diet. In preparation for the long cruise—which he will repeat this fall and winter—Hannegan stacked the yacht's galley with food which had no salt content . . . That's why visitors aboard the Hannegan yacht were served with Streit's kosher matzohs. "These matzohs are the McCoy," Hannegan assured his guests, for they are not ordinary ones, but the salt-free Passover matzohs.

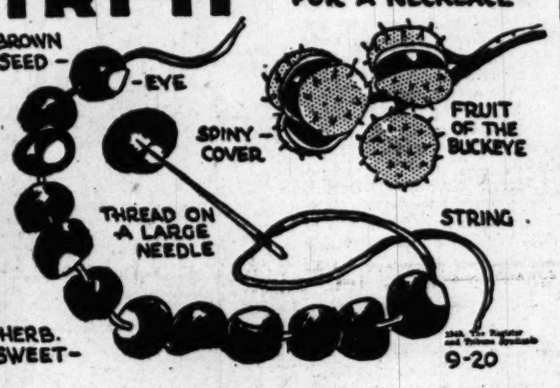
TRY IT

GATHER BUCKEYES FOR A NECKLACE



In the fall of the year a crop of mahogany brown colored seeds fall from the Buckeye and Horse Chestnut trees. These shiny round seeds with the light "eye" spot are especially tempting to children for collecting. The seeds or "nuts" should never be eaten for they are very bitter. Their color and smoothness are what tempts boys and girls to gather hats full for future fun.

Necklaces are attractive to wear and so easily made, though the punching of the hole might be hard for very young children. An easy way to make the holes in the "beads" is by driving a nail through the center of each nut. With a large needle and thread string enough "beads" to make as long a necklace as you wish.

When I was a boy I carried a shiny buckeye in my pocket for good luck, so a necklace of buckeyes should really be lucky.

TOMORROW—STORE FLOWER SEEDS FOR SPRING PLANTING.

What's the Verdict?

"GOING, GOING . . ."

Q. Mrs. Hunter read an advertisement of an auction that listed, among other items, "1 dozen cut-glass finger bowls." She was too busy to visit the pre-sale exhibit, and was late reaching the sale itself. When she arrived the auctioneer was holding up a finger bowl and asking further bids on "this lot of a dozen." "Is that the cut glass?" Mrs.. Hunter whispered to the woman next to her. "Looks like it,' was the response. "Going, going . . ." cried the auctioneer. "Fifteen dollars!" cried Mrs. Hunter. "Sold to the lady who just came in!" pronounced the auctioneer, banging his gavel. Actually, the cut-glass ones had already been sold, and the finger bowls then being sold were pressed glass and did not fit Mrs. Hunter's collection. She insists that because they are not what she thought they were she is not bound by the sale. Correct?

A. Although Mrs. Hunter was mistaken about what was being sold and upon which she bid, the fact is that at that precise moment her intention was to bid on the bowls the auctioneer was then holding in his hand, and which he was selling. Thus there was a meeting of minds as to the object being sold, and as to the price, so the sale was complete. It wasn't the auctioneer's fault that Mrs. Hunter made a mistake. If the glass had been extremely valuable, Mrs. Hunter could force delivery despite her mistake. (In practice, the auctioneer probably would permit Mrs. Hunter to back out of the deal, as a matter of courtesy) . . .

Why Not Forget?

Why do we always call to mind . . . Some old and hidden hurt? . . . Or worry over little words . . . That sounded somewhat curt? . . . Why do we make an issue now . . . Of what is gone at last . . . Instead of overlooking it . . . And burying the past? . . . Instead of spreading happiness . . . By turning wrath aside . . . And thereby helping other souls . . . To overcome their pride? . . . There is no good in jealousy . . . Or any vengeful gain . . . And every ounce of selfishness . . . Is finally in vain . . . They only lead to sorrow and . . . The deepest of regret . . . When it is so much better to . . . Forgive and to forget?

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Maybe Younger Set Had Hot-Rod Horses In 1909

Mathew K. Amberg of 426 Brandywine st. se. notes with amusement that an automobile trade paper currently carries an item designed to prove that autos are better and safer than horses.

By way of example, it says that in 1909, 3850 persons were killed in accidents involving horses—which is 30 fatalities for each 100 million miles traveled. Today, although total fatalities are much higher, autos travel 33 times as far each year, and the deaths average only seven for each 100 million miles.

The statistics are very interesting, but District Liner Amberg can't help but wonder whether the auto industry is worried about competition from the horse at this late date.

Our own Walter Haight, who harbors a certain prejudice against autos, contends that they'll never really take the place of the horse until Detroit learns how to make a good steeplechaser.

DOG'S LIFE

Everybody knows how the kids come running from all over the block when they hear the Good Humor Man approaching.

But Mrs. George M. Dove of 3503 Jefferson st., Hyattsville, Md., reports that a dog in her neighborhood invariably gets there first when the ice cream man sounds his bell.

"Buttons" makes a mad dash for the vendor's cart, then paces back and forth as patiently as possible until his master arrives with the money.

And Mrs. Dove can't help but wonder whether some day "Buttons" won't lose his dependence on humans, and buy his own ice cream.

If dogs can carry brandy flasks, there's no reason why they can't carry a change purse.

SUGGESTION BOX

Herb Harris of 1121 N. Kensington st., Arlington, Va., has an idea for making Washington's visitors feel more at home.

"Very often," says Herb, "you'll see them at various sightseeing points, taking snapshots of each other. Usually, they wish there was some way for the picture taker to be included in the group photograph.

"Very often I've walked up and volunteered my services, and they've always been received with sincere thanks."

It's a fine idea, especially for me. Only an utter stranger would trust me with his camera.

A KLUTTZ FAN

Mrs. Helen M. Mathewson of 3620 Queenstown dr., Mount Rainier, Md., shared a cab downtown from the Capitol with a fellow who asked to be let out at The Washington Post. Later, she reported:

"It wasn't until after he got out that I realized it was Jerry Klutts. He ought to get a new picture for the top of his column; the one he's using now doesn't do him justice."

STREET SCENE

It was late in the afternoon, and traffic was building up to the evening rush.

The fellow with the Kentucky license plates pulled up in front of the 14th st. entrance to Garfinckel's, and parked—apparently waiting for somebody. A car with Maryland tags stopped in the curb lane behind him.

When the light changed, the fellow in the Maryland car realized what had happened—and blew his horn. Kentucky stuck his hand out the car window, and waved him on.

"I can't get around you," shouted Maryland. "There's another lane of traffic moving here. Get going—you can't park there."

Kentucky ignored him. Maryland got pretty angry.

"Move it," he growled, "or I'll push you out of the way." Kentucky stood his ground in lofty disdain.

Maryland put his car in gear, and ploughed forward. There was a metallic crash as part of Maryland's bumper fell to the ground.

Kentucky decided it was time to move.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Bevin Is 'Ernie' at Hill Luncheon

By Drew Pearson

Over steak and apple pie, British and American leaders kidded each other merrily the other day at an off-the-record luncheon given by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Pearson

Senator Vandenberg set the mood by greeting British Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin with a breezy "Hello, Ernie."

Later Chairman Tom Connally of Texas pretended to be solemn, but the twinkle in his eye gave him away, when he called upon Bevin for the usual "few remarks."

"Whenever the British come over here," Connally declared in his introduction, "we always feel a little elevated, a little lifted up—a little lighter."

This playful reference to Britain's success at lightening the United States Treasury wasn't missed by Bevin.

"I have heard it said that a blood transfusion is good for both the donor and the donee," he retorted with a wry smile. "It relieves the donor of excess blood and relieves the donee by putting new blood in his veins.

"The only worry is whether the blood is of the same type. But there is no concern about the blood of our two countries being of the same type."

Thanks to George III

Then the British Foreign Secretary referred to King George III, whose tyranny started the Revolutionary War.

"There is a picture of George III hanging on the wall of the Foreign Office," twinkled Bevin. "Every morning I used to lift up my eyes and thank George III. For, if it hadn't been for him, the United States wouldn't have been populous or wealthy enough to help win the war."

But Bevin was dead serious as he added: "There are some who believe we are still living in the age of George III. It has been spread around that we are an old nation, but I want to tell you we are not old. We are young and vigorous."

Sang 'The Red Flag'

During the lunch, Secretary of State Acheson recalled how he and Bevin had met in the elevator one evening on the way to a crucial meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Vishinsky at the Paris conference. Leaving the elevator, the United States Secretary of State and the British Foreign Minister walked arm in arm down the long corridor singing "The Red Flag."

This brought a warning from Senator Elbert Thomas, Utah Democrat, that Acheson had "better not let the FBI know about that."

"Oh I can protect him," offered Bevin. "Mr. Acheson didn't know the words. He just went along 'tra-la-la-la-la.'"

V. P.'s Domestic Affairs

Senator Connally came up with another subtle crack about the widow from St. Louis when he introduced Vice President Barkley.

"Barkley used to be a member of the Foreign Relations Committee," explained Connally, "but recently he has taken more interest in domestic affairs."

Middle-Income Houses

Next big housing battle in Congress will occur when the Senate considers the Sparkman "middle income" housing bill, which recently emerged from the House badly mangled by the real estate lobby, with the aid of their friend GOP Representative Jesse Wolcott of Michigan, plus a deft assist from American-Laborite Vito Marcantonio of New York.

What few people, except those directly affected, realize is that almost one third of the Nation's families have incomes insufficient to enable them to rent or buy decent homes under current sky-high housing costs.

And the public housing bill recently passed by Congress doesn't help this middle-income group, who earn from $2000 to $3750 a year. It provides rental housing and slum clearance only for families in lower-income brackets.

The Sparkman bill is aimed primarily at helping these $2000-$3750 families, chiefly war vets, by direct Government low-interest loans under a cooperative arrangement similar to the Government's financing of rural electric cooperatives.

However, by some skillful parliamentary maneuvering at a time when 340 members were absent—most of them attending the swearing-in of Tom Clark to the Supreme Court—the real estate lobby struck this important section from the House bill.

The Senate is still to be heard from and Senator John Sparkman of Alabama is confident he has the votes to reverse the House sell-out to the real estate lobby.

Johnson Fires More

Secretary of Defense Johnson will soon eliminate 30,000 more civilian employes from the Federal pay roll, including several thousand working on public relations. Deep cuts in defense pay rolls, incidentally, will lead to the dismissal of a lot of the military and civilian gumshoe workers making loyalty checks—due to the fact that not so many Federal employes will now need to be checked.
